BETHLEHEM PLANT FACES STRIKE

BULLETIN

Monroe, Mich., June 11 (INS)—Thirty-two men and two women arrested by vigilantes during and after the strike riot at the Newton Steel plant yesterday were released today and told to leave town.

Youngstown, O., June 11 (AP)—A mass movement on Monroe, Michigan, by CIO workers was called off today and the Newton Steel Company continued to operate under the protection of armed citizens.

While troubled Monroe breathed easier, Governor Martin L. Davey of Ohio called principals in the wide steel strike to his office for peace conferences today, but more trouble loomed on the labor front.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee called a strike for 11 p. m. (E.S.T.) in the huge Johnstown, Pa., Cambria Mill of Bethlehem Steel, the nation's second largest producer, to bolster a walkout on a Bethlehem subsidiary railroad.

Homer Martin, national president of the CIO United Automobile Workers, ended a motor caravan procession to Monroe from Pontiac, Mich., where automobile workers declared an industrial holiday to protest routing of pickets last night from a Republic Steel Corp. subsidiary.

34 HELD AFTER CLASH

The vanguard of approximately 750 automobile workers turned back from their rallying point 10 miles north of Monroe after cars were halted at the city limits by sheriff's deputies, American Legion members and special officers. They left 34 persons, including two women in the Monroe County

Tragic Marriage Of Jean Told by Ann Marsters

In this fourth installment of "The Tragic Life Story of Jean Harlow," Ann Marsters, who obtained and wrote the last interview with the radiant Jean, reveals how the star came to love Paul Bern, who was twice her age. No other star's career has survived such a devastating blow as a bridegroom's suicide. Miss Marsters, who got her information at first hand, in Hollywood, tells what Bern meant to Jean, and how she took his death.

By ANN MARSTERS

CHAPTER 4

Copyright by The Boston Evening American

After Jean Harlow's divorce, in 1929, from the gay, irresponsible Charlie McGrew, it was more or less understandable why she should turn to a man like Paul Bern.

Bern was 42, Jean was 21 when they met. And to her he meant all wisdom and gentleness.

He was a finely educated man. He brought, to Jean, a background of a Columbia professorship, two degrees, a knowledge of art, and a splendid command of the English language.

Jean was impressed—perhaps a little awed.

With her meagre boarding school education, Bern's words, his power of expression, delighted her ears and made her feel that a whole new world was opening before her.

Cultured Man

Certainly he was a change from the "heroes" Jean had met in her rough-and-tumble love life of the

Truckman Killed In West Auburn

Worcester, June 11 (AP)—Michael Blazevicius, 22, of Fabyan, Ct., also known as Michael Black, was instantly killed early today in West Auburn, near here, when his truck hit a tree head on and was telescoped, pinning the driver in the cab. It burst into flames on impact.

Medical Examiner Frederick H. Baker said the man died from a fractured neck, crushed chest and third-degree burns. Black was trucking brewery mash, used as stock feed, from Worcester to Connecticut.

Ten of State WPA Aides Lose Jobs; All 'Curley Men'

Ten land-taking negotiators for the State Public Works Department were ordered discharged today by Commissioner William F. Callahan.

The discharges will take effect on June 18, in the interests of economy and because the public works department will be engaged in "reconstruction rather than new construction this year," Callahan said.

Reginald J. Murphy of Cambridge, salary $3600 a year; former Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester, $2940, and the following, who received $2160 a year:

Richard L. Casey of Brookline, Edward J. Cox of Chelsea, Joseph W. Lennon of Brookline, Joseph F. McLaughlin of Cambridge, Henry Nicholson of Dorchester, Joseph V. Queenan of Lowell, Max Rosenblatt of Malden and Augustus White of Newton.

These employes were on the civil service probationary list and would have won permanent civil service rights had they been retained until July 5 and 6.

CODMAN PAIR FINED $1000, FACE JAIL

William J. Driscoll, president of the Codman Hill Construction Company, and Thomas J. Flanagan, company bookkeeper, were each fined $500 for contempt of court today and ordered committed to Charles street jail.

Fines and commitments, by Judge Harold P. Williams in superior court, were for failure to obey a court order to produce books of the company in the Boston Finance Commission's probe of the concern's dealings with the city.

Judge Williams stayed the jail commitments until June 25, to allow counsel time to file a writ of error in Supreme Court. The fines were not stayed, however.

Not Paid to Divorce Wally

Simpson So Swears; Slander Suit Off

London, June 11 (INS)—Ernest Aldrich Simpson, divorced husband of the Duchess of Windsor, kissed a Bible and swore a voluntary oath in court today that he had not received any money to refrain from opposing the divorce suit which cleared the way for the recent marriage of his ex-wife and Britain's ex-king.

Simpson testified after his counsel, H. J. Warrington, informed the court that Simpson's slander suit against Mrs. Joan Sutherland, wife of an army officer, had been settled out of court.

SIMPSON ON STAND

Attired in a natty blue serge suit, Simpson took the stand and was asked by his own counsel:

"Is there any truth in the suggestion you obtained any money by refraining to defend the divorce proceedings?"

In a loud, clear voice, Simpson replied:

"Most certainly, no!"

Warrington informed Lord Hewart that Mrs. Sutherland had apologized and that Simpson was satisfied and was not pursuing the case to obtain damages.

He warned, however, that if the rumors are repeated by anyone he will sue for damages.

TRACED TO SOURCE

When the case was called, Warrington said:

"The rumor seriously damaged Simpson's character and leaped from tongue to tongue like wildfire. It was difficult to trace its source and stop its circulation.

"Fortunately for Mr. Simpson and unfortunately for the defendant, the divorce rumor came into the open when the defendant mentioned it at a luncheon where she unknowingly sat next to Mr. Simpson's sister.

"The action led to an apology with which Mr. Simpson is satisfied, but he is very jealous of his reputation and if the rumor is repeated by anyone he will sue for damages."

Warrington asked that the case be stricken from the records and Hewart replied:

"So shall it be."

Mrs. Sutherland agreed to pay costs of the action.

BROTHER OFF TO CONTACT KIDNAPERS

Stonybrook, L. I., June 11—Speeding off by auto, after receiving a mysterious message from a swarthy taxi driver, Frank McDonell, brother of Mrs. Alice Parsons, today was reported on his way to contact the kidnapers of the society woman.

Earlier today the missing woman's brother-in-law, Richardson Pratt, assistant treasurer of the Standard Oil Company, supplied $25,000 in cash with which to pay the ransom demanded.

Pratt's wife, sister of Mrs. Parsons, left her estate at Glen Cove, adjoining the J. P. Morgan estate, announcing she was going to Woodbury, Ct., to visit a girl's school which, inquiry showed, does not exist.

A second ransom message is said to have been received by telephone by William H. Parsons, the distracted husband.

HOOVER ON HAND

He is understood to have kept a secret rendezvous with federal agents already on the scene to familiarize himself with the details of the mysterious case before meeting newsmen.

The possibility has not been entirely ruled out by the authorities that Mrs. Parsons, who is said to resemble Anne Morrow Lindbergh, has been slain.

While the federal authorities are proceeding on the kidnap theory, local police are to drag several ponds in this vicinity.

TAXI BREAKS SILENCE

After a tense night of waiting, silence about the Parsons' home suddenly was shattered when a yellow taxi raced in the entrance and halted with screeching brakes.

The swarthy driver, in shabby clothes, jumped out and dashed into the house.

A few minutes later, the door burst open and young McDonell ran to his own car, parked in the yard. He was off a moment later, with the hackman in the yellow cab closely following him.

Evidently acting on advance information, police cars blocked off the road and refused to let anyone follow the two cars.

From the attitude of the police and the family, the message the taxi driver bore seemed to be the one from the kidnapers for which they all had been waiting.

PROBERS QUIT ESTATE

Hoover's reported dash here followed the departure of all G-men from the Parsons' mansion after they had painstakingly established headquarters there and installed a telephone switchboard.

Parsons demanded their retirement so that contact with the kidnapers would not be interfered with. Except for two state policemen, all officers quit the premises, and newspapermen likewise obeyed the wishes of the distracted husband.

After re-establishing headquarters in a house in the village, the G-men frankly stated they had no clues and were awaiting word from Hoover or his appearance in person.

In an atmosphere of increasing tension, the husband and wealthy relatives of Mrs. Parsons, this forenoon, made a new plea to be left alone in their efforts to contact the kidnapers.

The request was voiced by McDonell, brother of the woman missing since Wednesday forenoon.

LITTLE ACTIVITY

"We would appreciate it if you would stay away entirely," he told a Brookhaven township policeman, who dropped in at the white colonial home on Gould road at dawn.

"After all, we are still hoping to make some contact."

Rain drenched the rolling North Shore countryside, and there was few signs of activity around the house.

Throughout the night, Parsons, gentleman poultry farmer and Yale graduate, waited nervously, hopeful each time the telephone rang that he would get word from his wife or her abductors.

"We can only hope," McDonell, his brother-in-law, said.

Parsons, his eyes red from lack of sleep and his face and manner giving indication of his extreme nervousness and worry, went automatically about his farm duties this morning.

He talked to reporters who went to the house after abstaining from visits throughout the night, in deference to the family's wishes to give the kidnapers a chance to make some contact with the house.

"I am in a jam, an awful jam," Parsons said.

Someone asked him what he meant.

"Has the ransom been paid?" asked a reporter. "Has a second ransom note been received?"

"Please don't ask me," pleaded the distraught husband. "I don't want to be rude, but I can't discuss it."

A report went around the town that such a note was received, setting forth anew the demands for $25,000 and giving instructions as to when and where and how it was to be paid.

The original ransom note, found Wednesday several hours after Mrs. Parsons disappeared, demanded $25,000 and included a threat of possible harm to the prematurely gray-haired Mrs. Parsons.

Except for the broadcasting of the alarm, all police movements were closely guarded. Secrecy was clamped down immediately after arrival of agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

After a full day of investigation by more than 50 local, state, and federal officers and county officials, a brief message was broadcast through New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Illinois.

It read:

"Wanted, man and woman in black sedan, for the kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Parsons, of Stony Brook, Long Island."

COUPLE MIDDLE-AGED

The ransom note, found tucked in the Parsons' car on the Long Island estate, and the theory of Countess Anna Kupryanova, Russian-born woman who lived with the Parsons family, apparently were the principal leads in the wide search.

The couple sought were the middle-aged man and woman said by Mrs. Kupryanova to have called at the farm about 11 a. m. Wednesday, spoken to Mrs. Parsons, and driven away with her, ostensibly for a short run to Huntington, about 15 miles away, to try to sell some property.

Lieutenant Stacy Wilson, of the Brookhaven town police, who was the first man called into the case and who has been in the forefront of the investigation since, in an interview said:

"We are expecting a break any time, and we are working night and day checking clues, of which we have an abundance. Every indication points to a well-planned crime. Whoever executed this crime had thoroughly familiarized themselves with the family's activity.

TELLS OF FIRST CALL

"I have known Bill Parsons for some time. He called me at 7:40 p. m. Wednesday and asked me to come over to see him. He told me he was worried about his wife. He did not elaborate further.

"I called Patrolman Francis Fitzpatrick and told him to pick me up. We were there in a few minutes. Mr. Parsons told me about his wife having failed to meet him at the station after he returned from New York, and about her being missing when he got home by taxi.

"I talked to Anna Parsons (Mrs. Kupryanova), who said she was practically a member of the family. She told me immediately that something was terribly wrong. She told about how Mrs. Parsons left with the middle-aged couple.

"After questioning Bill Parsons and Anna Parsons, I was fully convinced that something was seriously wrong. (This was several hours before discovery of the ransom note.) I thought it was either kidnaping or foul play.

INFORM ALL POLICE

"I immediately notified Edward Bridge, chief of the Brookhaven police, and we informed the various police agencies, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"As we questioned Anna further, she told us that Mrs. Parsons said before driving off, willingly, with the strange couple: 'I'll see you after lunch.'

"She didn't return, and we failed to find anyone in Huntington, where she was supposed to be going, who had seen her.

"Mrs. Parsons left under very peculiar circumstances and we have only a very vague description of the people in the car. It appears from the present verbal evidence of Anna that Mrs. Parsons left with her two companions of her own free will, and that she did not suspect the consequence."

Investigation into the background of the members of the Parsons household spread to London when it was learned Mrs. Kupryonova had resided there at the same time as Parsons who, from 1923 to 1925, represented the interests of his late father, William Henry Parsons, an exporter of news print.

Authorities today gave out the official version of the ransom note. It read:

"Will Parsons:

"I have your wife for $25,000 ransom. I calculate you could get that money in 24 hours. I have no place to keep her longer. Meet in bus terminal in Jamaica P. M. 9 o'clock.

"Bring money in box. My man will call you by name and you will go with him. He will take you to your wife, but mind, if any cop is aboard you'll pay for it and she will never speak again."

SEAMAN SUSPECTED

Authorities suspected that a former seaman, probably British, had a hand in composing the note. They based this deduction on the use of the words "calculate" and "aboard," both nautical terms, and the use of the abbreviation for

Bloodhound in Kidnap Hunt

As bloodhounds were held in leash and only two New York state troopers, hidden from view, guarded the Parsons farm, the husband of the missing woman appealed to the kidnapers in a statement which read, in part:

"It will, of course, be useless and impracticable to attempt to follow the instructions already given by the kidnapers.

"However, I want to assure the party or parties holding my wife that I am willing and anxious to follow implicity and without question any further instructions given, and that they will be treated in the strictest confidence."

Friends said that the Russian countess, at first reported to have been adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Parsons as their daughter, had not been adopted although steps had been taken toward adopting both her and her son, Roy, 11.

BOY AT ACADEMY

Another report which was under investigation is that besides an inheritance of $165,000 which is shortly to become hers, Mrs. Parsons was soon to receive $25,000 from a trust fund. This is the exact amount demanded by the kidnapers.

This money was to have come from the estate of her aunt, the widow of Colonel Timothy S. Williams, who was president of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Co. From the colonel's own property Mrs. Parsons inherited $30,000 three years ago.

Mrs. Parsons was graduated from Miss Porter's Private School for Girls at Farmington, Conn., in 1918, and was married in 1925. Her husband had been graduated from Yale in 1910 and was a naval lieutenant in the World War.

SAYS MUTUAL RISKS 'GOOD'

While the Commonwealth Mutual Liability Insurance Company had accepted some applications for automobile coverage without investigation, about 80 per cent of its clients were "good risks," it was testified at the State House today.

Being questioned by the special legislative commission probing affairs of the now bankrupt concern was Joseph V. Cavanaugh of Jamaica Plain, one time president of the Commonwealth's affiliate, the State Underwriters' agency.

Cavanaugh said that he had been hired by Attorney George S. Ryan of Belmont, general counsel for the Commonwealth. As president of the agency he got $40 a week, he related.

"But even then I got stuck," Cavanaugh added.

At the hearing, now in its eighth week, it was disclosed that Frank Cohen, New York backer of the Commonwealth, had been asked to appear next Monday, but that the commission hadn't received an answer to its invitation yet.

"Mr. Cohen will be allowed to appear at a time convenient to him," the commission explained.

Cavanaugh said that when he took over as president of the Underwriters' agency in 1935 some applications for insurance had been accepted without a probe of the applicant's background but that within a short time this condition was changed.

He told the commission that there was no basis for previous testimany that all sorts of risks were taken.

Benjamin Watson and Charles J. Doyle stockholders in the Kilby Agency Inc. ,which succeeded the Underwriters', were summoned to testify today, but they did not appear. The commissioners made no comment, except to remark that these men were not present.

'Chicken Feed' Pair Rob 2 Couples

Worcester, June 11—Two "chicken feed" bandits held up occupants of two parked cars in the country club section here early today and got only $4.95 for their efforts.

They first accosted Wilton H. Currier of West Boiston street, as he sat with a girl companion in a car near the Worceester Country Club. Ordering Currier and the girl from the car, the bandits relieved the man of $3 and fled.

A short time later police were notified of the second holdup over the telephone by a man who refused to reveal his identity.

Montgomery, Ala., June 11 (AP)—Roosevelt Collins, diminutive Negro, was electrocuted in Kilby Prison early today for an attack upon a white rural housewife.

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Thunder and lightning and pouring rain. August 13, 1913. It only needed to be a Friday to complete the combination, if you're superstitious. But it was a Wednesday.

That was the day that the Johnson baby was born—the girl whom they christened Rita Ann a fortnight later.

The event took place in the Farren street home where William J. Johnson had taken his bride Lillian a year or so before. They live "just over the hill" in Chadwick street now.

When the nurse had to shut all the windows to keep the rain out, Bill Johnson was worried no end.

Repeated assurance that they were "all right" only kept him coming back. Then he'd ask again. And the nurse would patiently reassure him, because, you see, it was "Bill" Johnson's first child. Any father knows how that it.

"Bill" was a young conductor for the Worcester Street Railway Company. He's a veteran of 31 years now, and a veteran of another experience like this. He has a son, William J. Jr., present member of the Class of '40 at St. Anselm's in Manchester.

After the christening the Johnson baby sprouted a silken thatch of gold. Her brunette young mother and her chestnut-haired young father were delighted, mother more so than father.

BILL LOOKED SHEEPISH

"If it only stays that color," Mrs. Johnson sighed. "And if her eyes only stay blue. I know everyone says that babies are born with blue eyes and that they change, and that the hair changes too—"

"Oh, after all, what's the difference?" Bill wanted to know. "So long as she's healthy."

"But, Bill—" Mrs. Johnson protested.

"Well," he amended, "of course she'd ought to be pretty. Any girl who's pretty in this world has a better time of it, if she has brains, too."

Mrs. Johnson remembers Bill looking sort of sheepish then and adding:

"Go along to your trolley cars," she told him.

There was nothing particularly remarkable about Rita when she went to the West Boylston street school to get her first rudiments in the three R's. She was attractive "as kids are," father explained, but no genius.

"The only thing was, that she used to love to get the other children out in the back yard and have them dress up for 'plays'," he said. "But I guess all children do that, don't they?"

Before your reporter had a chance to answer that one, Mrs. Johnson broke in:

"But dad, don't you remember that she wanted to be like Lillian Russell and used to pester me to tell her all about her? The other children didn't do that, did they?"

"Gosh, mother, you're right," Bill replied. "Say, have we got that picture I took of her in the rig she thought looked like Lillian's? It's around somewhere."

OTHER PICTURES

Mrs. Johnson smiled and popped it right out of a book.

Bill was slightly abashed. He leaned over and whispered:

"Try and keep ahead of these women."

"What's that you said, Bill?" Mrs. Johnson wanted to know.

"Nothing, much," was his reply. "I'll bet you have the rest of them, too, all ready."

"I have," mother told him.

Your reporter was practically overwhelmed at not having to help search the attic or scour through the family albums, so he tucked them all away—

"But outside of the kid plays in the back yard, didn't Rita do anything when she was young that showed she was going to be an actress?" he asked.

"I don't know whether a press agent would tell it the same way, but the answer is no," Bill replied.

But Mrs. Johnson had something to say here. So she did say it.

READ SHAKESPEARE

"I'm hardly a press agent, but I do know that Rita used to be hiding up in her room reading Shakespeare out loud when I was looking for her," Mrs. Johnson put in. "I used to wonder what was the matter with the child."

"Did she do that much?"

"When she got into High School of Commerce you couldn't keep her away from her room. I guess she was always declaiming—she called it—up there. I could hear her, but I let her be. She wanted to join the Black Friars, the school dramatic club.

"Yes—" and here father took the floor. "Yes," he said, "they wouldn't let her in any of the plays because they thought she wasn't good enough. But she was stubborn. She finally became the secretary."

He paused for a moment.

"I don't like to say this," he added "but I don't know any of the girls who played leads then that ever made hits on the stage."

"Oh, Bill——" Mrs. Johnson said.

"Well, I don't care," he retorted.

"And we don't blame you, either," the reporter put in.

Then the conversation drifted to Rita's experiences with the boys. Was she ever in love? we wanted to know. Did she have a "steady?"

(Tomorrow, in the Boston Evening American another article in this series will tell the rest of the fascinating story of the girl who worked her way from serving hot dogs to starring in Hollywood.)

Austro-German Trade Pact Near

Vienna, June 11 (US)—Austria and Nazi Germany, increasingly estranged during the past few months, moved toward a reconciliation today with the appointment of a joint arbitration board.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Nazi finance minister, is expected in Vienna next Thursday to discuss with Austrian officials a new Austro-German agreement on trade and financial relations.

Doyle May Marry Libby, Paper Hints

London, June 11 (AP)—The Daily Mail today linked the names of Jack Doyle, handsome prizefighter, and blues-singing Libby Holman in a possible romance.

In an interview Doyle said he expected "to marry a beautiful, young American widow with a fortune in tobacco. Miss Holman, here during the coronation, fits these qualifications," the paper pointed out.

Movie Star Adopts 2

Loretta Young Takes Baby Girls

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service)

Hollywood, June 11—Beautiful Loretta Young, always associated with glamour, beaux who have pursued her and romance rumors, threw a bombshell into Hollywood when she admitted to me that she is a mother—by adoption.

Two little girls, Jane, age 3, and Judy, twenty-three and a half months, have been adopted by Loretta, one of the youngest stars in Hollywood, and as she confirmed the news Loretta laughed:

"Yes, it is really true. I've taken the children, Louella, and I am the happiest girl in the world. They are such darlings, blonde and beautiful. Until they came here, I just haven't known what I've been missing."

As I started to pour out questions, Loretta interrupted:

"There's just one thing I can't tell you—and that is where I got the children. That is a secret I hope I never have to reveal, and I want to forget as soon as possible that they are not mine. For I feel they really belong to me since we brought them home."

Already Loretta and her mother are at work on plans to enlarge her Holmby Hills home with a large nursery and building on the new wing will begin immediately.

And just like all new "mothers" she's already talking plans for Jane and Judy Young. If they want to be actresses, Loretta will be the happiest girl in the world—but it will be all right with her, too, if the tiny little blonde tots just want to grow up like average girls, get married and raise a family.

When I asked Loretta why she has decided to take two little girls instead of maybe just one little boy, she replied:

"It seems more like our family—just having girls. Sally, Polly Ann and I had so much fun growing up together and now that Georgiana (the youngest of the sisters) is 12, we just had to have baby girls in the house again."

I wonder if all this can mean that Loretta is never planning to be married again. She has been rumored engaged several times since her first marriage to Grant Withers, film juvenile, ended in divorce almost seven years ago. Since then it was thought that Loretta might marry any one of the numerous suitors who have paid court to her.

A really serious romance was her long friendship with Edward Sutherland, Hollywood director. But not long ago, they broke off—and this legal adoption of two beautiful children whom Loretta will raise as her own, makes me wonder if she will ever again enter the matrimonial state.

Hodge, McNeil Wait Plane to Boston

Major Clarence C. Hodge, commander of the Massachusetts National Guard aviation unit, and Lieutenant Joseph L. McNeil, his observer, who "bailed out" of their plane over the Nevada wilds during an electrical storm, awaited a plane in Salt Lake City, Utah, to take them back to Boston today.

Major Hodge was in good shape aside from a sprained ankle received in the 12,000 foot parachute jump. Lieutenant McNeil had recovered from his 55-mile walk to get aid from an Indian reservation.

Recounting their dramatic escape from death, the fliers told how they flew to 17,000 feet to get away from the severe electrical storm and were suddenly catapulted to 12,000 feet. Realizing the ship was unmanageable, both men bailed out.

They landed in a desert valley. McNeil, a 27-year-old South Boston youth, walked the 55 miles through a country infested with rattlesnakes to an Indian reservation. He brought back a truck for Major Hodge, who could not walk on his ankle.

PRIEST AT MOTHER'S RITES BY U. S. AID

It required the intervention of a congressman, a government order and the services of a pair of daredevil Coast Guard fliers, but the Rev. Hugh J. Gildea attended his mother's funeral in the Mission Church in Roxbury today.

He made the last leg of his trip from his Puerto Rico station in an airplane piloted by Coast Guard Lieutenants Richard L. Burke and Edmund E. Fahey.

They left the flying field at Cape May, N. J. at 6 o'clock this morning, battled strong headwinds, fog and rain all the way up the coat, and landed in East Boston at 8:28.

"The young padre showed plenty of heart," Burke said, professionally critical. "He never flinched, even when he knew we were flying blind.

"At 3000 feet, we couldn't see a thing until we were over New York."

Father Gildea is the son of Mrs. Catherine Agnes Gildea, 63, 22 Francis street, Roxbury, who died Monday.

Some days ago, he learned by wire that she was dying, and started by steamship for home. The weather was good when the ship left Puerto Rico, but thickened in the North Atlantic and by the time the boat made Cape May it was obvious he wouldn't get home that way in time to attend the funeral.

Told of the priest's dilemma, Congressman John W. McCormack got busy, and permission was granted for a Coast Guard flier to carry Father Gildea the rest of the way.

Burke and Fahey volunteered. Father Gildea spent last night in Burke's quarters, waiting for the weather to lift.

N. E. GIRL ASPIRES TO OPERA

Mildred Messer, 21, of New London, N. H., is working as a hostess in a tearoom here but she (and her teachers) believe it won't be long before she is entrancing opera goers with the liquid beauty of her soprano voice.

New England in the very near future may be able to boast an opera "great" in the petite loveliness of a New Hampshire farm girl whose voice has been receiving considerable attention at the New England Conservatory of Music, from where she will graduate next Friday, it was revealed today.

A virtual pastoral Lily Pons, the pert farm lass, Miss Mildred Messer, 21, of New London, N. H., while almost an exact prototype of the volatile French operatic and screen star, cherishes Jeanette MacDonald as her ideal.

In the vivacious Lily Pons manner, though it was a head of soft honey-hued hair instead of the glistening raven locks of La Pons that she tossed in parrying questions, Mildred described the struggle she had made in obtaining a musical education which she hopes will become the foundation of a career in light opera.

WAS TEA HOSTESS

"I was entirely on my own when I came to Boston after graduating from the Colby Junior college, in my home town of New London. Farmers don't make enough money to educate their daughters in distant expensive music schools, so it was touch and go until I had established myself in this, to me, huge city.

"Fortunately I received work as a tea hostess in a girl students' house on Newbury street and it was that work, menial as it was, that kept my high 'C' from sinking to the level of my shoe tops," she finished with a tinkling laugh.

It was Miss Messer's dramatic teacher, Professor Clayton D. Gilbert, the same Professor Gilbert who taught the fundamentals of acting to Rita Johnson of Worcester who, it was exclusively revealed in yesterday's Boston American, will succeed the late Jean Harlow in a feature picture, who prompted the little New Hampshire miss into accomplishing her numerous music honors.

For recognition of her excellent singing achievement she was made a member of the Pi Kappa Lambda, national honorary music society. She was graduated with highest honors from Colby Junior College with a degree of bachelor of music, and next Friday she will receive her degree from the Conservatory. She is also an accomplished pianist and has been engaged as soloist for the past year at the Old South Church in Copley square.

While she devotes a great deal of her time to her music study, she is far from being a wall flower, Miss Messer pointed out.

"I don't intend to fall in love just yet and I have my own preventative for that. When I am asked out I make sure that there will be a number of other couples in the party. In that way I make use of the old "safe-has proved highly successful and my heart is still beating in waltz time, but alone.

ONE RESERVATION

Then more seriously she said:

"I have worked hard to earn a musical education and I am ready to work harder to carve out a musical career, but if real love should come into my life that love would be greater than any career.

"Love, true love that knows sacrifice, looms higher on my horizon than anything so transient as a career.

"Music on the other hand is a part of me. No man who truly loved me could ever ask me to give up my music.

"Music is literally the sounding board of emotions. There is music that vividly portrays tragedy, music that records fear, love, all the human passions and moods. I find that I can register my every emotion through music."

Then the mischievous light flashed on again in her eyes and with her fingers running lightly over the keys she swung into the rollicking "Bubble" song from Rudolf Friml's operetta, "High Jinks."

CODMAN PAIR FINED $1000

Judge Williams characterized the failure of the two men to produce the company books at the court order as a "disgrace."

DOUBTS TESTIMONY

The court also declared the assertion of the defendants that the desired books were stolen to be "a mere subterfuge."

"I feel it is my duty to proceed with sentence on contempt," said Judge Williams after a lengthy argument by the defendant's counsel, Hubert C. Thompson.

"I have found that these books are in possession of the two officers of the Codman Hill Construction Company. Their excuse that they were stolen is a mere subterfuge. I don't believe what they testified to. I believe the books are still in control of these men.

"I entered an order of this court for them to produce the books and they haven't done it. I cannot look on it in any other way than as a serious contempt and I must impose penalty.

ALLOWS APPEAL

"This must be attended to at once. It is a disgrace and it is a flagrant disregard of the order of this court. I must recognize it as such and pursue the course of sentence forthwith.

"There may be a real question of law in connection with the sentence, but I am unable to see it. I do not wish to deprive the defendants of an appeal to an appellate court on writ of error, as I may be in error, but I do not feel it is my duty to allow this to go along until next fall—October—when the Supreme Court again sits."

Judge Williams then imposed the fines and sentences and allowed defense counsel time on the jail commitments.

In his argument, Attorney Thompson had declared no evidence was brought out that the missing books are in possession or control of the defendants.

U. S. BUYS 177 AIR BOMBERS

Washington, June 11 (US)—Secretary of War Woodring today announced award of a $11,652,000 contract to the Douglas Aircraft Company, Santa Monica, Calif., for 177 twin-engined bombers.

In money value, it is the largest aircraft order this government has let in peacetime. Woodring disclosed the planes will attain speeds in excess of 225 miles an hour and carry substantially heavier useful loads than present two-engined bombers.

Officers said the new plane would probably be armor plated, mount .30-calibre machine guns and carry up to 25 100-pound bombs each.

Delivery of the planes will bring to 1644 the number of first line planes the army will have on hand.

Snowslides Balk Plane Rescuers

BANKER SCORES TAX 'SEIZURES OF PROPERTY'

By means of direct and indirect taxes the Roosevelt administration has "virtually seized private property", Sydney M. Price, president of the Massachusetts Bankers' Association, declared today in his address to 30 members at the opening of the annual convention at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

Concentrating his attack on the present administration, Price indirectly assailed the relief program of the country. He declared:

"The new attitude toward banks is based on the premise that no one is really dependent on saving because the government will take care of everyone.

"Bankers throughout the country are concerned with persons who live from the public treasury and are not concerning themselves with the condition of the public treasury or the preservation of it."

WARNS OF "FAMINE"

Charging that the taxes imposed by the government may lead to famine, Price said:

"The present administration has virtually seized private property by means of direct and indirect taxes. The profit incentive is removed from society and then comes idleness of both capital and labor.

"And there is apt to be famine upon the land. It is not worth the while for the average American bank depositor to work and slave and have his legitimate profits taken from him by the government."

Another speaker, Charles E. Spencer, president of the First National Bank of Boston, continued the attack on the Roosevelt administration.

"It was touch and go after the bank holiday whether the American banks were to be turned over to be nationalized completely," he said.

DR. PITKIN TO SPEAK

"I'm afraid now that if American banking gets into a mess in the next five or 10 years, the banks on that occasion will be taken over completely by the Federal government.

"This will be thoroughly detrimental to the best interests of all."

The convention's program tonight will be featured by an addres by Dr. Walter B. Pitkin, Columbia University journalism professor and author of the best seller, "Life Begins at Forty".

8 HIGH SOVIET CHIEFS ADMIT TREASON

Moscow, June 11 (INS)—With Soviet newspapers openly accusing them of spying for Nazi Germany, eight high ranking leaders of the Red army went on trial in secret today on treason charges.

The defendants included Marshal Mikhail N. Tukhachevsky, until a month ago vice-commissar for war. The others also held such high positions that until their recent removal from office in abject disgrace they virtually held the fate of the Soviet army in their hands.

No espionage trial in the history of the Soviet has been shrouded in such secrecy as this one, whose announcement rocked the U. S. S. R. to its foundations.

A brief communique merely stated the trial was under way. Location of the courtroom was not disclosed. All the Soviet public knew was that the highest prosecuting officials of the government, headed by Vassily V. Ulrich, who has handled most of the "Trotskyist" trials, had been pressed into service to try the cases.

Conviction of all the defendants and execution by a firing squad was regarded as a foregone conclusion. All were said to have admitted their guilt.

"There is not and will be no mercy for capitalist spies.

"Bourgeois newspapers have set up a howl against these arrests. The inspired German press of Goebbels (Nazi propaganda minister) has called it a 'crisis' in the Soviet government.

"CHOP OFF HEADS"

"The viper of Fascist espionage is many-headed, but we will chop off its heads and ferret out and render harmless all the serpent's tentacles. For the eyes of millions of Soviet patriots are searching for the wellsprings of this venom."

All sections of the Kremlin-controlled Moscow press joined in excoriating the "villainy" of these eight traitors, accused of having conspired with the agents of a foreign power to deliver Soviet military secrets and engage in sabotage within the red army to ensure its defeat in event of war.

Whether, as a result, they hoped to establish a new Russian regime to displace the Bolshevik hierarchy or merely place the U. S. S. R. under the thrall of the foreign power accused of employing them has not been made clear in the accusations made public.

ALL PLEAD GUILTY

Besides former Marshal Tukhachevsky, the defendants are General E. I. Yakir, former military commander at Leningrad; General I. P. Uborevitch, former commander in White Russia, General R. P. Eideman, former head of the organization for training military reserves; General B. M. Feldman, a member of the general staff; General K. V. Putna, former military attache in London, and General V. M. Primakov.

They are charged with violation of their military duty, high treason and betrayal of the peoples of the U. S. S. R. and of the workers, peasants and Red army.

It was believed the trial may finish today. All pleaded guilty. Observers believed the only possible result would be death sentences.

Investigation established, said the communique, that the accused were in the employ of the military intelligence service of the foreign state and systematically supplied it with military secrets.

CIO OFFICIALS CALL OFF MARCH TO STEEL PLANT

jail as the result of clashes with heavily-armed law authorities.

David Watkins, SWOC sub-regional director, estimated 12,000 of the 13,000 employes in Bethlehem's vast Cambria mill would be affected by the strike order. Other plants of Bethlehem, which have refused to sign a CIO contract, are believed to be next on Lewis' union list.

STATE TROOPS ASKED

The mayor of Monroe asked for state troops after the Pontiac United Automobile Workers' local, declaring a city-wide holiday, sent a motor caravan which its leaders said would number 15,000 workers for a "peaceful declaration" in the southern Michigan city, where 200 special policemen smashed a picket line last night to escort non-strikers into a Republic Steel Corporation subsidiary plant.

After night sticks and tear gas were used to drive back pickets and permit reopening of the Newton Steel Company, Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan ordered preparations for quick mobilization of the national guard and state police and then awaited developments in the bloody strike for signed contracts from three major steel makers.

The first development came quickly as Martin urged abandonment of the march as American legionnaires and other special police with rifles and shotguns turned back a score of automobiles, the vanguard of the procession, at Monroe's northern outskirts.

PEACE HOPE SLENDER

Martin hurried from Detroit to Pontiac to confer with union members and then dispatched a delegation of 25 to Monroe to appear against the plan as these and other motorists were reported to have gathered about ten miles north of the city. The U. A. W. A. leader also sought to have the Pontiac industrial holiday abandoned.

Only a conference in the office of Ohio's governor offered the slender hope of peace.

Bethlehem Steel is generally believed to be the next target of the SWOC drive to unionize the steel industry—a drive which a Chicago union official said had cost more than $1,500,000 to enroll 700,000 steel workers in the CIO.

First to suspend operations in Pontiac for the invasion of Monroe was the Fisher Body plant. The Yellow Truck and Coach Company, another General Motors affiliate, was next. Pontiac Motor Car Corporation unionists also were called out.

LEGIONNAIRES ACT

Mayor Daniel A. Knaggs of Monroe ordered uniformed police to return to the city from the Newton Steel plant to re-enforce the Legion members in patrolling the streets during the emergency.

Heavy trucks barricaded roads near the mill, lookouts were posted in the surrounding marshland and nearly 200 special policemen remained at the plant where at least eight persons were treated for minor injuries after 800 non-strikers were moved inside in Republic's first attempt to reopen a closed mill.

"I regret the disorder and rioting in Monroe," Governor Murphy said in a formal statement. "There should be responsible heads on both sides who could reach agreements across a table. Responsible leaders can handle these things and it must develop that way.

"There was no excuse for the disorder. I suggested that the opening of the plant should be deferred until Monday to await the outcome of the conference in Columbus."

Representatives of all sides were summoned by Governor Davey late today to meet in his office in an effort to avert "grave responsibilities" in widespread strike against Republic, Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. and Inland Steel Corp. which has more than 70,000 mill hands idle for over two weeks and already has cost eight lives.

HOLD COLUMBIA GRAD

The strike call in Bethlehem Steel's subsidiary at Cambria came even as the SWOC was celebrating a decisive exclusive bargaining agency election vote among nearly 6000 workers of the Pittsburgh Steel Corporation at two plants near Pittsburgh.

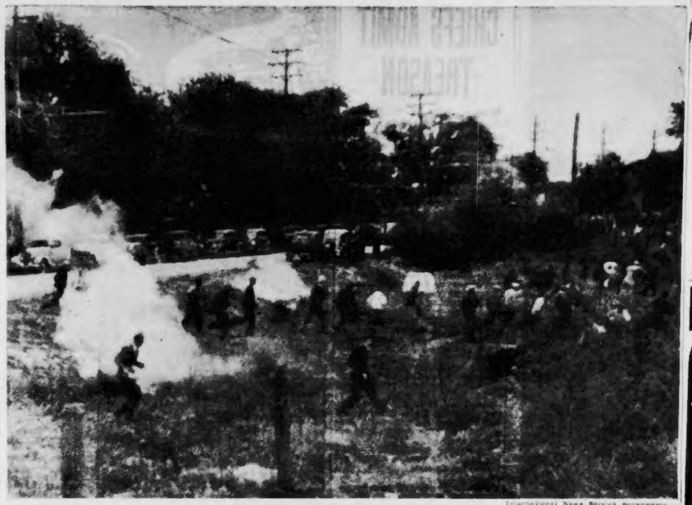
The John L. Lewis union received a 90 per cent margin of all votes cast—5287 yes and 645 no—the greatest ballot margin in its history. A two to one majority among 27,000 employes of Jones & Laughlin Corporation and a slightly greater margin among 2500 employes of the Sharon Steel Corporation at Sharon, Pa., and Lowellville, O., had been recorded earlier.

Swift maneuvers came on other fronts as Robert Burke, CIO organizer who a year ago was expelled from Columbia University after participating in an anti-Fascist demonstration before the home of Columbia's president, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, was arrested at Youngstown and charged with shooting "to wound or kill" during yesterday's hand-to-hand conflict between pickets and police in which 17 were injured.

"Back-to-work" movements were pressed by employe groups at Sheet & Tube and Inland Steel plants in Chicago's Calumet sector as Mayor Harold H. Burton revoked at Cleveland, effective tonight, the permit for a flying field used by Republic as a base to fly food above picket lines to besieged Warren and Niles (Ohio) workers.

In far-away Boothbay Harbor, Me., a summer resident sent by parcel post seven loaves and two fishes to workers in the Warren (Ohio) plant, and said he would protest if the Post Office Department refused delivery.

CIO Pickets on Run From Tear Gas Bombs



International News Service Soundphoto

With tear gas, vigilantes blasted away the picket line from in front of the Newton Steel Company's plant at Monroe, Mich. Here gas bombs are shown bursting about the pickets as they flee from the main highway through nearby fields. The gas attack took place as a long line of autos and trucks was carrying loyal workers through the plant's gates.

THREAT TO N. E. IN WAGE BILL, SAYS MARTIN

Washington, June 11 (INS)—Four major points of controversy involving the proposed maximum hours and minimum wages program today threatened to retard the bill's progress through Congress.

The points at issue, discussed frequently by witnesses during the two weeks of testimony, are:

2—Separation of the child labor provision from the measure for immediate passage, and further congressional study of the rest of the program.

FIGHT SPREADS

The fight over these provisions spread from within the joint congressional committee, considering the measures, to the floor of the House, with Representative Martin (R.) of Massachusetts, Republican whip, taking the lead.

Expressing himself in sympathy with the principle of the bill, Martin warned the proposed wage differential plan would be a "major calamity to New England."

"Unless there is a strong tariff adjustment section," he added, "the object of the bill will be nullified because the result would be a large increase in importations."

WARNS OF FAILURE

He said the government could not hope to accomplish its program if it "fails to prevent destructive competition from countries which have low standards of labor at the same time it is regulating industry in this country."

Both the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization recommended the protective tariff scheduled be made separate legislation.

In the senate the fight for a sliding tariff scale and a separate anti-child labor law was led by Senator Ellender (D) Louisiana.

42-Day Strike Ends In Hollywood Studios

Hollywood, June 11 (AP)—The 42-day strike of major film studio craftsmen, which impeded production and nearly led to a walkout of the Screen Actors' Guild, ended today in a "satisfactory agreement."

Union painters, makeup artists, hairdressers and scenic artists voted to go back to work today. Unionists said their demand for a closed shop was granted by the studios and wage adjustments were left for further negotiations.

Japan Police Grab 2 Dope Smugglers

Tokyo, June 11 (AP)—Japanese police, acting on information supplied by the United States government, arrested today two men whom they described as the leaders of an international narcotics smuggling ring with activities involving hundreds of thousands of dollars annually.

The two were charged with smuggling 247 ounces of narcotics into Seattle March 18. Police declared the contraband was brought in kegs disguised as Japanese soy sauce.

Belgian Traitors Granted Pardon

Brussels, June 11 (AP)—The Belgian Senate in an early morning session today passed a bill, 90 to 64, over the opposition of war veterans, to pardon all Belgians convicted of treason during the World War.

Safe 17th Urged by McLaughlin

Care in the use of fireworks and firecrackers during the coming holiday season was emphasized today by Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin.

"Children are not wholly responsible for all the calamities during this season of the year," the commissioner stated.

"Risks taken by adults in an attempt to do something spectacular have often resulted in the most serious of tragedies. Don't experiment with powder and other explosives.

"It is very important that stores where fireworks are kept for sale be kept free from any waste paper or other inflammables. Fireworks should be kept out of the reach of customers. Accidents can be avoided by using common sense."

Roxbury Widow, 32, Drinks Poison

Because she wanted to be with her dead husband, Mrs. Ella Brown Potto, attractive 32-year-old Roxbury blonde, swallowed a tumblerful of poison today, police reported.

The young widow's mother, Mrs. Mary Brown of Warren street, Roxbury, called police when she heard the moans of her daughter. Mrs. Potto was unconscious. After being treated at Boston City Hospital she was in such critical condition that her name was placed on the danger list.

Reno, Nev., June 11 (US)—The romance of Robert Raskob, son of the noted eastern financier, and Miss Dolores Hartor of this city, will culminate in marriage here today.

Moonlight Cruises Start Tonight

For the eleventh consecutive year the Nantasket-Boston Steamship Company tonight starts its 1937 season of moonlight cruises with free dancing.

This year a new steamer, Town of Hull, has been put into service as the "dance boat" and will leave Rowes Wharf at 8.30 o'clock.

According to company officials, many novel features have been planned for the inaugural cruise. An orchestra, known as the Nantasket Nauticaleers, will provide the dance music.

This new boat is radio-equipped with 14 loud speakers in all sections of the vessel.

During the summer season, weather permitting, cruises will be held Wednesday and Friday evenings under the policy of "no stags."

Rose Bimbo Gets 15-Year Sentence

Rose Bimbo, gypsy fortune teller, today was sent to Sherborn reformatory to start serving a 15-year sentence, longest term meted out to a woman in Suffolk County in years. She was convicted of the theft of $3580 from Mrs. Linda Cheng, white wife of a Boston Chinese doctor.

Pienton, the woman's husband, was sent to Concord reformatory for an indefinite term on the same charge.

Youth Improving in Iron Lung

Aboard S. S. President Coolidge, en route San Francisco, June 11 (US)—Passengers cheered today when physicians attending Frederick Smith, Jr., infantile paralysis victim, released a bulletin announcing the youth's condition had improved following new circulatory treatment.

The 26-year-old Notre Dame student, his body enclosed in an "iron lung," responded favorably to exercises of his legs and arms, performed by doctors and nurses who are accompanying the Chicago boy on the 10,000-mile homeward journey from Shanghai.

Both his respiration and blood circulation improved noticeably, doctors said.

Swimming and Tennis for Guests At Emily Young's Debut

By BETTY ALDEN

THE NEW VOGUE in debutante luncheons . . . which offers the guests other inducements in addition to delectable dainties and sprightly conversation . . . is continuing and increasing in popularity . . .

Yesterday's party at the Ritz, for Mary Lewis Abbott, ended in an informal community sing, and this afternoon's affair, given by Dr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Young for their daughter, Emily, combined both tennis and swimming with a refreshing luncheon at the Eastern Yacht Club in Marblehead . . .

MRS. WILLIAM W. CARUTH, JR.

In case you are wondering . . . the wave of luncheons, as against other types of parties, is occasioned by the fact that the masculine element of debutante age is engaged in examinations at Harvard and other institutions of learning . . . and therefore cannot be called upon to disturb their concentration by serving as escorts for tea-dances, dinners and balls . . . The masculine attraction at Mary Abbott's party yesterday was provided by Sammy and his cohorts, Lenny Welsh and George Harris, who formed a committee of three to be masters of ceremonies and use all their blandishments to induce the various talented guests to sing before the mike . . . It took a bit of persuasion at first to lure the girls into the limelight before the 60 or so guests, but once Catherine Little and Nancy Tucker broke the ice by crooning "There's No Wolf Around My Door," Cappy Bacon's masterpiece, the others took courage . . .

In response to a cry from one of the tables of, "We want Helen," Helen Johnson, sister of Katie Johnson, popular deb of a couple of seasons ago, sang, "You've Turned the Tables on Me," in her sweet soprano . . . and later Angela Lang and Anna Benedict favored the girls with a little crooning . . .

Emily was graduated from Winsor last week and is planning to enter Smith College in the fall . . . She is one of the girls chosen to represent Winsor at the Northfield Conference a few weeks hence . . . Among her guests were Marjorie Prince, Polly Morrill, Ann Smith, Pauline Tobey, Anne Conant, Deborah Sprague, Jean Carpenter, Peggy Verhoeff, Natica Bates, Virginia Lee Hyde, Faith Conant and Barbara Gilman . . .

Something's Dark In Ethiopia

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Haile Selassie wants Italy to give him back his Ethiopian railroad bonds. So the whole thing turns out to be another one of those stock rackets.

We'll bet if Haile asks real loud he will get Ethiopia back too. The fellow who follows Haile with the green umbrella finally got a break. He's in Paris now.

Selassie figured it's better to sue Mussolini in Paris, because if he loses he can always go to the movies. We can't understand how a fellow that smart ever lost a war.

The man with the green umbrella likes modern railroads. When Haile is in a lower berth is the only time he is allowed to close the umbrella.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Some years ago, they were looking for a new baseball writer for the New York American, and we said we had heard excellent reports of one of Otto Floto's bright young men on the sports staff of the Denver Post.

So they sent out to Denver and got this bright young man whose name turned out to be Gene Fowler. He was a tall, stringy youth, as he arrived in New York, with a wild gleam in one eye. There was a wilder gleam in the other eye. He was immediately dispatched to Chicago to cover a World Series then impending.

Damon Runyon

Caleb Van Hamm, dead these many moons, was then managing editor of the American, a mild and courteous man. He knew perhaps somewhat vaguely of an addition to the sports staff, but he did not know the addition's name.

Thus he was greatly astonished when he commenced getting telegrams of considerable length, and intense coherency, from somebody in Chicago signing himself Gene.

The telegrams related in detail the weather conditions in Chicago, and told of the many fine characters who resided there, with specific reference to prominent bartenders.

TRIED CODE CIPHERS

The bewildered Mr. Van Hamm tried code ciphers on the telegrams but nothing came of it, and then he took to reading them upside down to see what happened.

Finally with a batch of telegrams in his hand he wandered, greatly confused, about the office, asking others what they made of the missives, and finally somebody in the sports department said they might be from the new baseball writer, A Mr. Fowler.

"Call him in at once," said Mr. Van Hamm in an alarmed tone. "He's nuts!"

Then as an afterthought, he added:

"Better assign him to the city side."

GREAT REPORTER

On the city side, then, Gene Fowler became one of the greatest reporters the big town has ever known. He covered all the famous stories of his reportorial time. His narration of the electrocution of Ruth Snyder and Judd Gray remains a newspaper classic to this day.

He was managing editor of the American for a time. He was first sports editor of the Daily Mirror, when the late Arthur Brisbane was running that paper, and his didoes with the sports page make-up, had Mr. Brisbane in something of a dither most of the time.

Gene Fowler's bizarre sense of humor found full play when he got to monkeying with pictures and type.

He joined with Mr. Joe Moore when that gentleman took over the Morning Telegraph, and put the English, so to speak, on the paper, patterning it after the London papers. Gene Fowler thought that was great fun for awhile, but the novelty wore off.

He was press agent for the late George Tex Rickard at Madison Square Garden for a time. Before he came to New York, Gene Fowler refereed a lot of fights and wrestling matches around Denver, and even managed a fighter by the Fowleresque name of Soakum Yoakum. Even now the one pastime Gene Fowler truly loves is wrestling.

TURNED TO HOLLYWOOD

Finally he went to Hollywood and became a scenario writer, and that, for some years past, has been his occupation.

Somehow, as he went through life, viewing the parade with saturnine eye (the one with the wilder gleam in it) Gene Fowler managed to find time to knock off two novels, "Trumpet in the Dust," and "Shoe the Wild Mare," and two autobiographies, "The Great Mouthpiece," and Timberline."

He wrote another novel called "Madam Silks," sold it to a publisher, then decided it was a bad job, and purloined the unprinted manuscript out of the publisher's vault and destroyed it. To make up for it, he wrote "Trumpet in the Dust" in thirty days.

Recently, he has somehow managed to find time in Hollywood to write still another novel called "Salute to Yesterday," that is to be published this Fall.

"I took two years to do it," said Gene Fowler yesterday. "After re-reading my others, I decided that those fellows who take two years to a novel might know something, at that."

He had just planed in from California to go into his annual Summer hibernation on Fire Island, a hunk of sand that sticks up out of the Atlantic off Great South Bay, that seems to have a strong appeal for hermits.

TURNED DOWN $150,000

Gene Fowler is now around 46, and is gray about the temples, and getting stout, but we noticed that the wild gleams remain in both eyes. We recalled something we read a few days ago in a Hollywood gossip column.

"Is it true," we asked, "that you just turned down a writing contract from a movie producer for three pictures a year at $50,000 per picture, or $150,000 per year?"

"That's correct," Gene Fowler said.

"Mr. Fowler," we said, "Mr. Van Hamm was right."

South Boston Girl, Hurt May 31, Gains Consciousness

Miss Madeline McEvoy, 18-year-old daughter of Patrolman Thomas McEvoy of South Boston, critically injured in an automobile accident May 31, has partially recovered consciousness for a brief period in the past 18 hours, doctors at Carney Hospital said today.

Except for the brief interlude, when she apparently recognized her mother's presence at the bedside, the girl has been in a coma since the accident, in which a Roslindale youth was killed and another Roslindale youth injured.

Late last night the girl, holding her mother's hand, murmured, "Hello Mom," but did not open her eyes. Then she appeared to sink back into the coma.

The fatal accident occurred in the early morning hours when a tire blew on a small coupe, police said, was driven along South Boston's Strandway by George Richmond, 21, of Washington street, Roslindale.

Frank Lachinsky, also of Washington street, Roslindale, and riding in the rumble seat with Miss McEvoy, suffered injuries which resulted in his death at Carney Hospital a few hours later. Richmond himself was injured, but not seriously.

Riding with Richmond was Miss Adele Fenimore, 19, of East Eighth street, South Boston. She escaped injury.

Miss McEvoy is one of five children of Patrolman McEvoy, a member of Boston's police department for 17 years and now attached to South Boston station.

HE FOUND ALL-BRAN BROUGHT REGULAR, DAILY ELIMINATION

Get rid of half-sick days—with the headaches, the listlessness, the "always tired feeling." Frequently, they come from common constipation . . . due to meals low in "bulk."

All you have to do is eat a delicious cereal regularly: "Every morning, for years, I have had a good helping of your ALL-BRAN, and it means regular, daily elimination."—Mr. E. N. Kring, 312 E. Hickory St., Fairbury, Illinois.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is so much better than drugging yourself with patent medicines.

Within the body, ALL-BRAN absorbs twice its weight in water, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the system.

Eat two tablespoonfuls daily, either as a cereal with milk or cream or in recipes. Three times daily in severe cases. Sold by all grocers. Made and guaranteed by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

GLOUCESTER GETS W. R. HEARST CUP

Gloucester, June 11—John J. Connors, assistant publisher of the Boston Evening American, today presents the William Randolph Hearst trophy to Gloucester high's crack rifle team here.

It is the fifth time in seven years the local team of the R. O. T. C. has won the award. The five students who scored 918 points to top all New England high schools were: Captain Paul M. McPherson, Major F. Harrison Poole, Lieutenant William J. Sutherland, Sergeant Paul E. Graham and Corporal Robert E. Noble.

The presentation is the high light of the field day that is to mark 52 years of military training for students of the school.

More than 500 uniformed cadets parade through the streets of the famous sea town, led by Cadet Colonel Donald E. Cunningham. Thousands lined the route.

In the afternoon the companies of the unit compete at Newell Stadium for the Bacheler medal, awarded in honor of the high school principal who organized the first military unit in 1885. The gold medal goes to the best drilled company.

Also, to be awarded to the individual cadet who drills most smartly, is the Gaskell medal. The medal, at first given by Colonel Edward A. Gaskell, beginning in 1885, is now awarded by his descendants.

There are six other awards for excellence in drill.

Lieutenant-Colonel Clyde A. Selleck, U. S. A., will decorate the colors of the regiment for the 17th year, rating it top regiment among school cadets in the country.

The field day events will close with a sergeants' party in the armory this evening.

The outstanding feature of the program is to be the presentation of the W. R. Hearst trophy to Captain McPherson of the rifle team. Mr. W. R. Hearst himself sent a congratulatory telegram to the members of the team from his home in California.

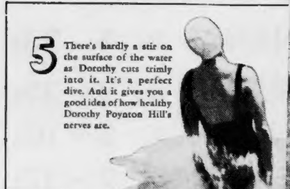
3 Instead of the "pike" with body bent at hips—or the "tuck" with body bent at hips and knees—Dorothy executes the somersault the hard way—by the "layout" with body completely outstretched.

4 Beginners are cautioned not to do this dive without first trying it on the suspended harness used in gyms to teach tumbling.



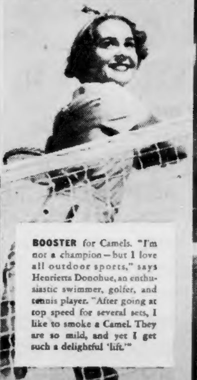
5 There's hardly a stir on the surface of the water as Dorothy cuts trimly into it. It's a perfect dive. And it gives you a good idea of how healthy Dorothy Poynton Hill's nerves are.

WORLD'S CHAMPION HIGH-DIVER

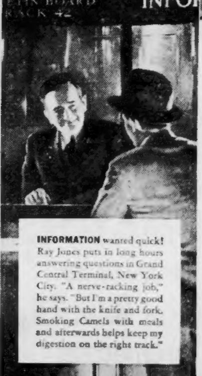
SOME OF DOROTHY POYNTON HILL'S TITLES:
National High-Diving Champion (33 ft. tower) for 4 years ...U. S. Springboard Champion...Winner in 3 Olympics

"I PUT great emphasis on good digestion," says Dorothy Poynton Hill, Camel smoker. "It's a long way down when I dive from the high board," Dorothy continues, "and if you add all the spins and twists I do—you can see why I enjoy Camels 'for digestion's sake.'" Mealtimes (right), and between meals, too, Dorothy prefers Camel's mildness. "I smoke whenever I want to," she says. "Camels are so mild that they never jangle my nerves, and don't irritate my throat." By speeding up the flow of digestive fluids and increasing alkalinity, Camels give digestion a helping hand. Take your cue from the steady smokers. Make it Camels! They set you right!

PLAYING spectacular golf. Ralph Guldahl averaged less than 72 strokes for 65 rounds of medal play—a new record! Speaking of the strain of tournament golf, Ralph says: "Sure I like to smoke. But give me a cigarette that's mild. I mean Camels. They never get on my nerves."



BOOSTER for Camels. "I'm not a champion—but I love all outdoor sports," says Henrietta Donohue, an enthusiastic swimmer, golfer, and tennis player. "After going at top speed for several sets, I like to smoke a Camel. They are so mild, and yet I get such a delightful 'lift.'"



INFORMATION wanted quick! Ray Jones puts in long hours answering questions in Grand Central Terminal, New York City. "A nerve-racking job," he says. "But I'm a pretty good hand with the knife and fork. Smoking Camels with meals and afterwards helps keep my digestion on the right track."

'Panamex' Even Gets Into the Kitchen

FROM MARTHA LEE'S FRIDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER WMEX

That it has long been the policy of homemakers of this fair land to be "good neighbors" is an accepted fact—but when the "good neighbor policy" becomes international, that's news!

W[illegible] at [illegible] countries in the Western Hemisphere centered on the opening of the Pan American Exposition in [illegible] Texas, tomorrow [illegible] that "[illegible] news [illegible] from [illegible] to foo[illegible] neighbors [illegible] 'daily bread' is going 'Panamex'!

New York designers started the trend with Panamex dresses, hats and accessories as romantic as their South American sources. Table settings of gay, vari-colored Mexican pottery and Latin American linens, as interesting as the ancient Mayan, provide a bright background for the parade of dishes that are new taste sensations to North Americans.

Because Pan America grows literally hundreds and hundreds of varieties, fruit is playing an important part in "Panamex" foods and not the least of these [illegible] own popular banana, the good neighbor of two continents. South American cooks [illegible] way with [illegible] as they serve the golden fruit in a variety of delicious and interesting [illegible] from cocktails to dessert. Inspired by the Pan American Exposition the Panamex dishes given below are the advance [illegible] for spring menus. If you would be a good neighbor (and a popular one) serve these at home.

ENSALADA MEXICANA
(A Mexican Salad)

- 2 oranges
- 1 grapefruit
- 2 ripe bananas
- 2 apples
- 4 small beets
- 1 tablespoon lime or lemon juice
- 1½ teaspoons salad oil
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon chili powder
- ¼ cup coarsely chopped peanuts
- 2 tablespoons crushed peppermint candy

Peel oranges and grapefruit, remove membrane from sections and dice. Peel and dice bananas, apples and beets. Make a dressing of the lime or lemon juice, salad oil, salt and chili powder. Combine all ingredients lightly but thoroughly. Serve well chilled on crisp lettuce. Serves 6 to 8.

AZTEC SALAD
(Red and Gold Beauty)

Place three slices of red, ripe peeled tomatoes on romaine leaves. Place a slice of [illegible]-cooked egg on each slice of tomato. Just before serving add blanched shaved almonds and diced ripe bananas to French dressing. Serve dressing at table.

BAKED ORANGE FRUIT CUP
(A Tropical Dessert)

- 8 large oranges
- 9 pasteurized dates, sliced
- 1 tablespoon fresh keeping cocoanut
- 1 tablespoon raisins
- 1 tablespoon walnut meats, chopped
- 1 egg white, stiffly beaten
- 1 teaspoon sugar

Cut tops off oranges. With a sharp knife below [illegible] a small portion of each orange near the top. Then work the knife around, lift out pieces of the remaining pulp until the shell is clean. Mix orange pulp with dates, cocoanut, raisins and nutmeats. Return to orange shells. Place oranges in a baking dish with [illegible] of water in bottom of pan and bake in slow oven for [illegible] minutes. Remove from oven and put on each orange a spoonful of meringue made from egg white with cocoanut and return oranges to oven to brown.

NEW WAYS TO LOVELINESS

"Your Figure, Madame!"

AILING FEET CAN CAUSE CROWS'-FEET

By IDA JEAN KAIN

DO you know it may not be a new girdle you need to make your figure glamorous and fetching in your new spring frocks, it may be a new pair of shoes!

Fantastic? Not at all. Unhappy feet balanced on teetering high heels or squeezed into the wrong last throw your figure out of line.

You're thinking of ugly shoes now, and wondering how much glamour broad "common sense" shoes can give you. But today the makers of health shoes have learned how to sugar coat the pill. Their scientifically constructed health-giving shoes are modishly styled. They look like Paris and feel like boudoir slippers. When you have discovered the last that gives you the greatest comfort and keeps your [illegible] and [illegible] always [illegible] whatever [illegible] shoe [illegible]. You can choose [illegible] dress or evening shoes in the same individual last and your feet will be healthier and your posture better.

If you're a business girl you may or may not use your feet a great deal during the day. But if you're a housewife you probably take thousands of steps a day just in the course of normal activity. [illegible]

Beauty Questions And Answers

Question—Fate has etched a number of deep wrinkles on my forehead. I am only thirty three, and up to now have always worn my hair swept back from my brow. Do you think I have passed the stage where I could get away with bangs. They would certainly be the solution to hiding my wrinkles. MRS. H. S. M., Salem.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I do not believe it is humanly possible for any two people to [illegible] and respect each other more than my fiancee and I.

We have been engaged for the [illegible] two and a half years, and [illegible] see no prospect of marriage. I can never get enough ahead [illegible] a recent job.

I'm willing to work and according to an intelligence test, [illegible] to me by an expert in [illegible] line, I am more than men[illegible] efficient.

Should I take a chance and marry on $14 per week, though I just manage to scrape along on that alone? And there is no future in sight. But we do want [illegible] and our children. My girl stays at home, helping her parents at their store.

If your [illegible] has helped in her parents' store that should count for experience when she applies for a job which will bring in a pay envelope.

And why don't you try and see what your city has to offer in the way of vocational training or adult education which should enable you to receive higher wages? Apply to the superintendent of schools in your city, where these classes are being held. BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I [illegible] a very good training as a [illegible] parlor operator but [illegible] have not a license [illegible] in this state.

I feel it would be a waste of time and money to go to a beauty school again.

Is there a place in this town where they would teach beauty culture without cost?

I am a widow with two children, in my middle 30's, and want to get a license so I can practice beauty culture in my own home. A. S.

DEAR FRIEND

Apply to the license bureau in the courthouse of your city.

If it's necessary to have a license from a local beauty parlor, why not offer your services to one already established, and then pass the examination for a local license?

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

West opened the Jack of hearts. Declarer won with the Ace and counted tricks. [illegible] even if he were to lose to the diamond Queen he still would be able to take three diamond tricks, three hearts, two clubs, and at least one spade.

On the assumption, therefore, that the diamond finesse was a sheer guess he led to dummy's King and finessed through East. West won with the Queen and promptly shifted to the ten of spades.

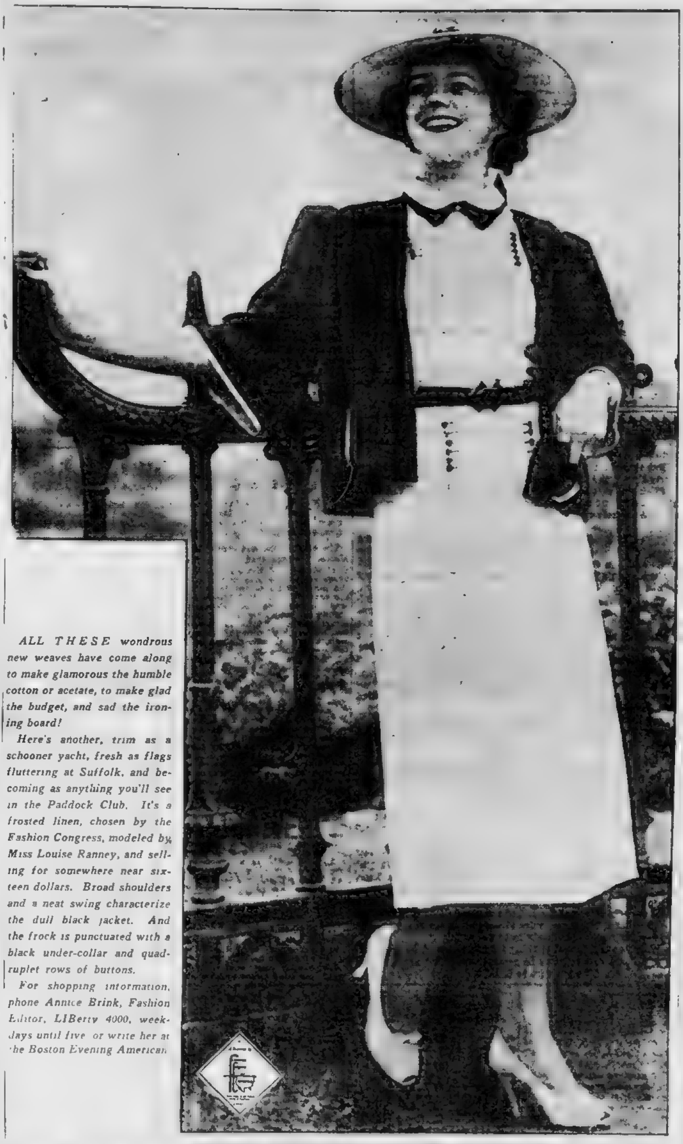
Now too late declarer saw that he had not envisaged all the possibilities. The club Ace was still outstanding and had to be knocked out in order to establish nine tricks. But meanwhile there was the spade menace to be considered. If East had the club Ace it would now be safe to put up the Ace of spades since West would be unable to regain the lead for a second lead through dummy's spade Queen. If West had the club Ace, however, and East the spades, to play dummy's Ace would merely delay defeat.

With this latter lay of cards, the winning play would be to hold up the spade Ace until West, who probably was shorter than East in spades, was out of the suit. If West had the club Ace and no more than three spades, defenders would win only two spades, one club and one diamond.

Deciding to hold up, declarer saw no harm in trying the spade finesse. East smothered the Queen and continued spades. The Ace of clubs gave East entry for his established spade suit and declarer was down two.

The diamond situation had not been a tossup! The one danger point of the hand had been in spades. To lose to the diamond Queen in East's hand would be unimportant: spades could not be attacked by East, and declarer could easily handle a club or heart return. The lost contract had been the result of poor analysis.

'Frosted Linen' Is New



ALL THESE wondrous new weaves have come along to make glamorous the humble cotton or acetate, to make glad the budget, and sad the ironing board!

Here's another, trim as a schooner yacht, fresh as flags fluttering at Suffolk, and becoming as anything you'll see in the Paddock Club. It's a frosted linen, chosen by the Fashion Congress, modeled by Miss Louise Ranney, and selling for somewhere near sixteen dollars. Broad shoulders and a neat swing characterize the dull black jacket. And the frock is punctuated with a black under-collar and quadruplet rows of buttons.

CHAPTER 31

"Well, Stanislaus, where I was," Edward said, "isn't one of the show spots. It's wild. Of course I did have some rather thrilling adventures. A terrific forest fire broke out down in a canyon two ranges from us. It was out of the outlook's vision, and so it was raging before we got to it—"

Before he knew it he was telling the story about the rolling log, and Mickey Brainerd, the ranger whose life he saved.

They hung on his words. It was always a good story.

But scarcely had he finished when Carson said "Wish I could stay on longer with you two interesting people. But I've got to run. Marie Therese has told you, of course, that I've asked her to help out in the office for a while—"

He seemed to be waiting for an answer, so Edward said "It's up to her, of course."

"The girl whom she'll be replacing," Carson went on crisply, "is getting $125 a month. Since it is rather temporary, will it be all right with both of you if we make it $30 a week?"

* * *

"Now we both have jobs!" Marie cried happily, for the first week, with its struggle for carfare and lunch money, was over, and, best of all, Edward had found work, too.

HER JOB

Hers was a sort of receptionist's position, really, for the factory was in Los Angeles, and there was just a salesroom and a comparatively small workshop in San Francisco.

A queer place. A big barn of a loft in a building just below Market street. A cavernous elevator that moved slowly. A small, surprisingly up-to-date office and reception room, equipped in the modern manner. A show room where samples were kept. And in the rear, the workroom.

Walt, it appeared, didn't spend much time in San Francisco. He came up two or three times a year, stayed a couple of weeks or a month. The rest of the time, baldheaded, old Mr. Harris, and young, energetic Mr. Stepp were in charge.

Miss Mead, the stenographer, and Mrs. Kraus, the bookkeeper, had no time for the new office assistant, but Marie didn't care. She was far too excited about having a job [illegible] the models that Walt showed her, admiring his advertising displays, enjoying her fascinating noon hours, when she could cross Market street, walk up Post or Geary, and be on Grant avenue where window-shopping is the best in the world.

Edward's job just made everything perfect. Some college friends, in the real estate business, were opening a new tract, in the hills above Oakland.

They wanted another salesman, someone who knew people. Of course it was all on commission, but Edward felt sure that it would be worth his while.

Each day Marie set off in the morning with Mr. Wilson, who didn't try to conceal his pleasure and pride in her.

"The boy's wife," he said when he introduced her to his cronies of the train and ferry boat.

And when they were beginning their second week of commuting together, he said shyly:

"You might as well say 'Pop'—sounds funny calling me Mr. Wilson!"

So after that he was "Pop," and Edward was amused, and his mother set her thin lips tighter, and said nothing at all.

But it [illegible] paying their own way was enough for Marie.

The first week Edward came home late and tired, had little to say. But on Wednesday he burst in like a cyclone, yelling:

"Mom! Pop! Where's Marie? I made a sale! I made $200!"

Two hundred dollars! For a sale. They were half-mad with excitement.

"We've got to celebrate this!" Ed said.

"As soon as I get the dough we'll do like you've been wanting to, honey—we'll go to the city and have dinner and dance and hit all the high spots."

Mr. Wilson went down to the basement, came up with a bottle of pre-prohibition rye. "We might as well celebrate now," he said.

"Claude! We got that for medicinal purposes!" his wife cried.

But he had his way. Even Mrs. Wilson drank, but gingerly, to Edward's success. There was no doubt in anyone's mind but what it was a career.

CHAPTER 326

MY implied prediction that Roderick and Betty would grow restless under Junior's tales of what he had seen during our trip to the White Mountain peaks was not fulfilled.

If we had had to wait for restlessness on their part in order to present the bows and arrows we had bought for them, I do not know when they would have received their gifts.

And when in answer to Betty's impassioned, "Do you mean there isn't anything more to tell?" he answered vaguely, "Why! after that we just come home!" I was ready to counter Betty's disap[illegible] with a pro[illegible] which I knew would be ex[illegible]

"He's not only ready, but he's [illegible] to go," Katherine said with a mischievous grin at Dicky, and I threw up my hand as a signal to the waiting children.

"Don't run, but come over here, now."

They obeyed the injunction at great cost to their nerves, I suspected, but came up to us quite sedately. With a flourish Dicky led them around the car and when their eyes fell upon the [illegible] know costly bows [illegible] their explanatory [illegible] was expelled as one breath. Forbes Finds Canada Trade Slowing Down

Mild Recession Began at Opening of This Year; Mining Profit Up

By B. C. FORBES

B. C. Forbes

Se[illegible] in Canada, I find that [illegible] has been on the [illegible] there ever since the [illegible] year opened.

T[illegible] has occurred [illegible] expansion [illegible]

[illegible] per cent [illegible] 36 per cent. In [illegible] quarter [illegible] a year ago. International has [illegible] working force [illegible]

I was asked, however, to caution [illegible] not to flock there [illegible] the [illegible] of the em[illegible] and to safeguard the health of its workers, this company insists upon the most rigid [illegible] examination of every applicant and only those in the fittest condition are taken on.

Wall Street has frequently decided that much of the demand for nickel has been coming from European nations hurriedly preparing for war. I'm told, however, that this view is an exaggeration; that the industrial use of nickel both at home and abroad has been steadily broadening and that the industry is in a healthy state.

We hear so much these days of rapidly multiplying gold output among Ontario's mines that the actual total, $21,231,000, for the first quarter seems modest. The gain over twelve months ago was less than 12 per cent., whereas silver produced increased 26 per cent. in value and copper fully 14 per cent.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports that, during the last week in May, its economic index dropped from 111.1 in the previous week to 110.

Wholesale prices have dropped from 85.1 to 71.8 in twelve months, bank clearings from 97.4 to 85.4.

But the general economic index is still 7.5 above a year ago, thus:

	May 30, 1936	May 22, 1937	May 30, 1937
Car loadings	73.2	86.2	[illegible]
Wholesale prices	71.8	85.4	85.1
Invest. bond yields	143.3	140.3	143.1
Bank clearings	85.4	103.9	97.4
Com. stock prices	114.1	131.5	133.3
Shares traded	109.7	179.5	[illegible]
Economic index	102.5	111.1	110.0

The Dominion government, keen to develop mineral resources, is sending out 300 men, under experts, to conduct geological research and also topographical mapping in the various provinces.

The high prices which have ruled for all metals have greatly benefited Canada.

One hears little of large-scale trading in American stocks by American speculators on Canadian exchanges. Apparently, London is the favorite market for dodging the heavy tolls levied upon stock transactions carried on within the United States.

The economic down-trend in Canada relatively mild though it has been, recalls the pronouncement by the Bank for International Settlements that economic upswings very rarely have lasted more than five years and that improvement in Britain began in 1932.

So far, little is heard of any slowing down in the United Kingdom. Armament demands unquestionably are proving a factor there. And the British Government's colossal program is rapidly getting up steam. Therefore, this artificial stimulant may postpone definite reaction for quite a while.

WEEKLY Business REVIEW

FARM PRODUCT PRICES LOWER

By ERIC FRIEDHEIM

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 11 (INS)—Weekly business review:

PRICES — Widespread rains throughout the agricultural areas which brightened the outlook for favorable crops this week brought another downward movement in price quotations on foods, grain, cotton and other farm products.

Commerce department price indices for numerous commodities showed declines to the levels of January. It was shortly after that month that prices started their rapid advance which was noted with concern by administration economists, and which climaxed in a sharply-worded warning from President Roosevelt.

PRODUCTION — Labor disputes coupled with seasonal recessions, caused a noticeable slackening in industrial production this week.

According to commerce estimates, steel mill operations have been reduced to 77 per cent of capacity from a rate of 90 per cent two weeks ago. This curb is attributed mainly to strikes in the Chicago, Youngstown and Cleveland areas.

Reviewing production activity for May, the department found output that month highest since 1929.

FOREIGN TRADE—Administration attention was focussed this week on American trade relations with the Far East. A group of Japanese economists is holding a series of conferences with Secretary of Commerce Roper and other government officials on mutual problems.

A commerce survey found many discouraging aspects in the U. S. Japan Commercial picture. The department saw little prospect of developing a market for wheat in the Nipponese empire. In addition Japan has stimulated cotton production in North China to compete with the United States and India.

GOVERNMENT FINANCES — Treasury spending for the current fiscal year moved past the $7,000,000,000 point Tuesday. Revenues up to that time totalled approximately $4,500,000,000, giving the government a deficit of more than $2,400,000,000.

Money in circulation reached war-time proportions, with $9,857,000,000 reported outside the treasury. This represented circulation of $40.99 per capita.

Chemical Exports at 6-Year Peak

April imports of chemicals, industrial oils and related products continued at record levels totaling $21,346,500, against $23,118,400 in March and $14,000,000 in April, 1936, according to Department of Commerce preliminary statistics.

Imports of fertilizer materials have been running about 30 per cent heavier in volume than last year, totalling 248,300 tons, valued at $5,473,000 in April, against 184,079 tons, valued at $3,843,300, in April, 1936.

Exports of chemicals and related products in April totaled $15,445,000, a six-year peak and 22 per cent above the April, 1936, exports of $12,700,000.

25 Years Ago

Wages, Hours Bill Feature Eyed by Haney

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, June 11—While it is crowded off the first page by strike news, the Senate hearings on the wages and hours bill are duly reported by the press. And they may well be.

One of the most significant episodes of late has been the statement of Senator Black, Alabama, who sponsors the bill, that it is necessary to have the general wage regulation feature in order to put across any sort of minimum wage or the child labor prohibition.

He said: "If we wrote a flat minimum wage in the law without discretionary authority to vary this wage according to conditions, we would go directly in the teeth of Supreme Court decisions which have said that an arbitrary wage cannot be set."

This is absolutely incorrect. The fact is that the Supreme Court has justified minimum wage and child labor laws and has done so only on the ground that they are for general welfare purposes. Such measures are by nature essentially arbitrary; they have to be exceptions. Accordingly, they are not to be justified as part of an economic system of wage rates, but as measures for health and good citizenship.

The surest way to get child labor prohibited is to let that feature of the bill stand on its own merits.

* * *

A point of practical interest is that this shows the weakness of the bill. Its sponsors are driven to use misleading subterfuge in an effort to get a following.

Their reversal of the logic by trying to make the child labor and "sweated labor" provisions seem to be dependent upon general wage fixing, is like other losing tactics, for example, the proposal to pack the Supreme Court was put forth as a means of expediting decisions!

But this did not fool the public or Congress. Now it seems unlikely that such obvious deceptions will be any more successful.

(There is even hope that the public will see that the flood control plea is just a smoke screen for putting the federal government into the role of being an electrical Santa Claus.)

* * *

The political wiseacres began by saying that the bill is sure to pass. But we heard that about the bill to pack the Supreme Court! And you can't help but be impressed by the widespread opposition to this latest attempt to revive the "National Recovery Administration."

Thus, the American Federation of Labor objects that minimum wages become maximum wages. Mr. Lewis, for the Committee for Industrial Organization, objects that the bill will limit his collective bargaining schemes. Manufacturers are objecting that exceptions made for small concerns will wreck competition. Negro leaders object that the bill will fix relatively low wages on the race, through its provisions concerning differentials.

All thoughtful people must be objecting to putting such sweeping economic power into the hands of a political board dominated by the President.

For these reasons, I am inclined to forecast that the Black-Connery bills will not pass, at least in anything like their present form.

* * *

One question that arises is this: If this general wages and hours bill were to be passed, would it have the same effects as the "National Recovery Administration" measure did, first causing a rush of buying and then a slump?

Such would probably not be the case. At least, any such effects would be much more limited both in breadth and in intensity.

First, the bill does not allow exceptions to the Anti-Trust law as its predecessor did. The tendency of the administration just now is to attack employers' monopoly (not labor monopoly). Thus, while costs might be somewhat affected, price advances would be limited.

Third, most large companies already maintain the wage and hour standards that seem likely to be proposed.

While the textile and clothing industries would be much affected, I doubt that industry in general would find much buying driven in—even if the bill were to be passed.

United Air Lines May Traffic Up

Passenger traffic in the United Air Lines picked up substantially since last month, when the line installed new and larger equipment on its transcontinental run, officials indicated.

Available figures were said to indicate that in May the line's traffic ran about 50 per cent ahead of April and within 15 per cent of May last year. In the first four months this year traffic ran about 23 per cent under a year ago.

FIRST NAT. STORES

Earns $4.24 for Fiscal Year

First National Stores, Inc., reports for the fiscal year ended March 27, 1937, net profit after taxes, depreciation and all other charges of $3,647,001, equal after preferred dividends to $4.24 a share on the 827,634 shares of common stock outstanding (less 10,557 shares in the treasury). This compares with net profit of $3,163,329, or $3.65 a share on the common in the year ended March 28, 1936.

The balance sheet as of March 31, 1937, showed current assets of $20,797,198, including $4,214,265 cash and $5,025,528 "governments," and current liabilities of $5,185,698, with net working capital of $15,611,500. This compared with net working capital of $14,418,106 a year earlier.

President Arthur O'Keefe said in part to stockholders:

"For the fiscal year ending March 27, 1937, earnings were charged with direct taxes of $1,435,078. This amounts to 28 per cent of our profits before taxes for the year, or $368 for each store we operate, or $1.75 for each common share, or 1.18 per cent on sales; and is an increase of $212,503 over last year. Our direct taxes continue to increase each year and are 86 per cent higher than in 1930.

"The problem of an increased burden of taxation remains one of the major problems of conducting a business such as ours. In the matter of special discriminatory type of taxation, assessed on the basis of number of stores and thus aimed specifically at our type of business, little headway has been made in our territory.

"In fact, the only tax of this type in the New England states, Maine, was repealed recently by action of the Maine legislature. This tax method constitutes a threat and no doubt will continue to be advocated, but that it is economically unsound, discriminatory and punitive in nature has come to be realized more and more fully by legislators and the consuming public has become fully conscious of the increased burden such taxation places upon the family budget."

Of the 16 spot commodity prices, one (cocoa) lost more than 47 per cent of its value between the middle of January and the middle of May. Two others, rubber and flour, dropped fully 25 per cent in value, while lead, steel scrap, and lard each lost more than 20 per cent.

The average decline in the 16 commodities amounted to 17.7 per cent. A few of the staples have recently reversed the price down trend, while some others are still losing ground.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, June 11—Reopening of negotiations for a new contract between General Motors Corp. and United Automobile Workers of America, affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization, can be made any time after today.

The existing contract signed last March, provides that during the final 60 days of the six months' agreement either side may notify the other of its desire to revise the pact. The original agreement was entered into last February and was supplemented by the March contract. This supposedly marked termination of the dispute. Nonetheless, sporadic outbreaks of labor difficulties have since persisted in various of the plants of G. M.

New Plan Forecast For Steam Preferred

A new plan for New York Steam preferred is expected in financial circles. This expectation is based on the importance to Consolidated Edison of this stock, for should dividends on Steam preferred be omitted four times in succession sole voting power goes automatically to preferred shareholders. Consolidated Gas, it was pointed out, must take steps to protect its big investment in the steam properties. Analysis of the Public Service Commission's rejection of the share exchange planned by Consolidated Edison led brokers to the opinion that the Commission was not opposed to the merger, but felt that Edison was being too liberal.

Bank Portfolios And Future Prices

What will be the condition of bank portfolios when the return to so-called normal money rates has arrived? This question has inspired one bond house to advise its institutional clients to anticipate what will happen in the long run. If the return to "normal" takes five years, this broker commented, the probable price depreciation in a 30 or 40-year bond carrying a 3½ per cent coupon is apt to be enough to wipe out all of the interest received in the interim. Bankers holding these issues, the broker said, satisfy their own uneasiness over such investment by saying that the break is not immediate and that they will dispose of the investments in time to avoid an embarrassing situation. However, early this year, he pointed out, when the high grade market had a decline, which many supposed heralded a much more substantial period of liquidation, very few bankers had anticipated it, "and most of them saw their capital profits of 1935 and 1936 drastically reduced or wiped out."

Foreign Zinc Use Up Last Quarter

Consumption of zinc by countries outside the United States the past three months totaled 95,742 short tons monthly against 92,657 tons monthly the like quarter of 1936, according to the American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

Rail Dividend

Providence & Worcester Railroad Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share, payable July 3 to stock of record June 9, contingent upon receipt by the road from trustees of the New Haven Railroad of rental due June 30.

Wool Goods Are Showing Signs Of Improvement

New York, June 11—Trading in wool goods is beginning to show signs of improvement, according to the New York Wool Exchange Service. Cloak and suit houses are beginning to anticipate their needs for the fall season, with the result that sales of women's wear fabrics are showing a gradual increase. While demand for men's wear fabrics is slow, mills are well employed and all indications point to heavy initial business on tropical worsteds when these summer goods are opened in the next few days.

Spot business on tropical worsteds and gabardines was quite brisk during the week, but sales were less than expected due to the fact that stocks were light and mills were unable to fill orders. Sentiment in men's wear markets is veering toward the optimistic side due to the fact that clothing sales appear to be recovering, and manufacturers are more hopeful about the outlook than they were a few weeks ago.

Consumer resistance to higher clothing prices appears to be waning, although it is still being encountered in some centers.

UNFILLED ORDERS

"Unfilled orders for men's wear fabrics are estimated at a shade under 50,000,000 linear yards, or the equivalent of about 15 weeks production at the present rate of operations," says the Exchange Service.

"Included in this total are about 5,000,000 yards of material for the Army and Civilian Conservation Corps which will help mills to maintain operations during the summer months. The remainder consist of suitings and overcoatings. Mills are of the opinion that the bulk of the business for fall has been written, and a number have begun to prepare lines for the 1938 spring season.

"Prices remain firm, despite recent easiness in wool values, the explanation being that fabrics values did not follow the advance in raw material. In addition, mills are burdened with higher labor costs, which more than offset any decline in raw material values. Outside of spot calls for summer goods, spot business last week was slow. Clothing manufacturers are in receipt of a steady flow of piece goods from the mills, and, as a consequence, feel no need for drawing on jobbers for supplies.

ENCOURAGING SIGN

"Mills booked considerable business on dressy worsted coatings for women's wear this past week. This development was encouraging, in view of the fact that woolen coatings have been predominant for the last several years. Indications now are that worsted coatings will come into their own this coming fall. Most of the recent business was confined to the knotted boucle weaves.

"Some additional business was done on fleeces and tweeds, and on the types of goods used in garments for school wear which stores usually feature in August. Flannels were in slow demand, being in the midst of their between-seasons lull. Some business was done on snow suitings, but volume business is not expected on these items before early next month. Dress goods were in slow demand, except for some low-priced spun rayon mixtures and a few standard worsted crepes.

"Heavy buying of wool underwear by the United States Army and Civilian Conservation Corps was a feature in the knitted goods section during the week. Warm weather stimulated re-orders for worsted swim suits and other types of knitted sports wear."

LONDON Views Their MARKET

HEADACHE IS INTERNATIONAL

By LESLIE GOULD

International News Service Financial Writer

New York, June 11 (INS)—Misery, they say, loves company, so the down-in-the-mouth New York brokerage fraternity should get that kind of consolation out of the following comment by the London Economist—the leading financial journal—on the current market situation there:

"It is only slightly wide of the truth to say that there have been no markets this week."

But to get on with the British comments:

"The revised version of the N. D. C. (Britain also has alphabetical symbols, this one meaning National Defence Contribution—a politer name for tax) has indeed robbed the industrial and commodity markets of every shred of interest and hopefulness.

"The concessions have had a bad reception, and if the technical situation in the markets had not been so greatly strengthened by the recent liquidation (London had a worse shake-out than the Hatry crash in 1929) a period of adversity rather than mere sloth would certainly be the result."

If the above does not strike a sympathetic chord, then brokers here should listen to this—keeping in mind that the comment is regarding the British market and not the American one:

"For the moment, industrials cannot be valued on any precise basis; investors may attempt to console themselves with the thought that the expected yield of 25 million pounds (the British currency) from N. D. C. is not extreme.

"But even if this estimate proves accurate, the blow to enterprise and the uncertainty of the precise burden for individual companies renders rational equity investment almost impossible."

So the brokerage headache is not just local—it is international.

Sloan Sees Crops Best in 10 Years

Crops in Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad territory may prove the best in 10 years, says Matthew S. Sloan, president.

The bumper forecasts apply not only to wheat, but also cotton and other crops which would be moved by the M-K-T, Sloan said.

Gross revenues of the Katy in May are estimated at around $2,590,000, against $2,567,220 in April and $2,444,206 in May, 1936. Gross revenues for the first five 1937 months were approximately $12,450,000, against $11,941,205 in the like 1936 period.

Wheeling Steel Plans Preferred

Wheeling Steel Corp. has notified the New York Stock Exchange of the proposed creation of 381,517 shares, $5 convertible prior preferred stock, of no par value, and an increase in authorized common stock from 500,000 shares to 1,500,000 shares.

SIGHT HELD 'AD' KEY

Selling Basis, Hearst Man Shows

The combination of sight and the printed word is the key to advertising, according to L. J. McCarthy, director of marketing of the Hearst magazines. Of all five senses, sight is the most important and the one on which successful advertising is based.

Mr. McCarthy addressed a gathering of more than 1,000 advertising representatives at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday sponsored by the Hearst magazines. Psychologists show 87 per cent of human brain contact is achieved through the sense of sight because it is most acute, he said, declaring:

"Seeing 'advertising,' then, is not only an asset to business—it is essential to the national up-shoot of sales, for if you and I could not see 'advertising' the business of our great corporations would dry up like pools in the Sahara Desert."

Mr. McCarthy produced for the Hearst magazines the first marketing map of the United States, which has now been adopted by many of the country's leading manufacturers as a trading area system. He presented many factual examples covering a period of years to prove the effect of sight on advertising.

There is no country in the world where people are so eager for the latest improvements in merchandise as America and American magazines provide one of the greatest selling fields in the world for producers, he declared, stating, "we buy only what we want and we want to see it before we buy. Seeing is the basis of all advertising and selling."

Earle H. McHugh, director of advertising for Hearst magazines presided. The only other speaker was William F. Bigelow, editor of Good Housekeeping who spoke for the ten Hearst magazines represented, whose monthly circulation tops 7,000,000 copies. Mr. Bigelow declared that the "fundamental reading habits of the American public have not changed."

In addition to Mr. Bigelow, editors from the following Hearst magazines were present: Cosmopolitan, Pictorial Review, Harper's Bazaar, House Beautiful, Town and Country, American Architect, American Druggist, Motor Magazine and Motor Boating.

Present also were William O. Warner, president of McCall Publishing, and O. J. Elder, president of Macfadden Publications.

Economic BOWKNOTS IN Europe

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Through the courtesy of [illegible] R. Bancroft, president [illegible] American Institute of [illegible], the writer is privileged to present some of the [illegible] of a valued Parisian correspondent of the Boston [illegible].

[illegible] comments on dictatorship [illegible] made in a letter to Mr. [illegible] following a trip through [illegible] and Italy provide much [illegible] thought especially for [illegible] would manage economics.

[illegible] it is pointed out, [illegible] economic bowknots [illegible] the reason that once [illegible] with economic efforts [illegible] there is no end to [illegible] As the Parisian [illegible] eagerly notes, it [illegible] to regulate exports [illegible] the currency or the [illegible] once begun it involves [illegible] of collateral [illegible] and the final result is [illegible] bureaucracy which [illegible] economic activity. That is [illegible] correspondent's [illegible] of what is happening. He is on the ground and [illegible] to judge the situation, and it seems to this writer [illegible] here in the United States [illegible] ground and are either [illegible] blind or dumb if the [illegible] are ignored or soft-[illegible].

* * *

Thus far in May New England business activity has declined from the high levels of April, according to the weekly survey of Dun & Bradstreet. However, the decline has not been precipitous by any means. In fact, activity seems to have reached a rather stable level and is running along at an average about 10 to 15 per cent above the corresponding weeks of 1936. The textile industry offers the real highlight in the current trade situation in this area. Cotton mills after discovering they were running ahead of orders also experienced a decline in new orders which tended to restrict activity. Wool and worsted lines, however, apparently shook the lethargy of previous weeks and the Boston wool market is firmer and more active. Rayon mills are extending themselves to capacity to fill their orders.

* * *

We think the situation in New England [illegible] typical of other [illegible] sections and, if right, it [illegible] safe to assume that while [illegible] upsurge of trade was [illegible] April literally by execu-[illegible] the decline has been halted [illegible] which look to be more [illegible] normal for the times. And [illegible] who project a sharp cut-[illegible] the trade line may be mis-[illegible].

* * *

Stock prices are at the crossroads. It is either up or down now and the question of which route to follow cannot be begged for long. We think up is the logical expectation. But the effect of strikes on earnings may have been more marked than suspected and as a result prices may take the road to lower levels in order to fully discount the situation. So far the market itself has not provided anything but minor hints that the direction is up. Rather impressive accumulation has been going forward and some sunshine in the news, particularly in regard to midwestern labor conditions, will probably be enough to start a rally.

* * *

Technically speaking, the indecision of prices has prevailed for so long now that averages could move somewhat farther than many probably expect. On the upside, for instance, rails could climb to 62 and [illegible] to 190. Downside, the [illegible] of 50 and 61, respectively, should be noted. Both sets of probabilities based on the Dow-[illegible] averages.

Notebook—As of the end of May Foster Wheeler's unfilled orders from domestic companies were between eight and nine million dollars . . . This is sufficient to run them at capacity for balance of year . . . It is said, however, that quite a falling off in new business has been noted by the company . . . Payment on preferred accumulations still appears likely this year, as the common may show as much as $4 per share . . . Houston Oil's 11 cents per share earnings in April attracting new buyers of the stock on setbacks . . . Estimators place Addressograph - Multigraph 1937 earnings at $2.50 per share.

OIL SHARES RESIST TREND

New York, June 11 (INS)—The stock market lost ground again today with rails, steels, motors, utilities, coppers and rubbers the weakest groups. Oils resisted the downward trend.

U. S. Steel and Republic lost about a point each, closely followed by Bethlehem. Consolidated Edison hit a new 1937 bottom.

Losses of a point and more were shown by Western Union, du Pont, Pullman, Montomery Ward, Lone Star Cement and Westinghouse.

Bonds lost ground on an irregular front. Governments were mixed in quiet dealings. Grains registered gains running to more than a cent a bushel. Cotton was steady.

CURRENT ITEMS

Interesting to analysts today was the week-end survey of Dun & Bradstreet which found that, due partly to the abrupt arrival of warm weather, many retailers are currently enjoying the best sales thus far in 1937.

Labor shutdowns affected some districts, it was said, but for the country as a whole distribution for the week ran from 10 to 20 per cent above the same period last year. In all leading cities sales were estimated to have moved strongly upward from the previous week's totals.

Sterling, at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions, was off a cent at $4.93 7-16. The French franc was up .00⅛ of a cent at 4.45 cents.

I. B. A. A. President Warns Congress on SEC Bills

Chicago June 11 (AP)—Edward B. Hall, president of the Investment Bankers' Association of America, warned Congress in a speech here last night to "weigh the costs and disadvantages" of the Lea and Barkley bills, which he said would give the Securities and Exhange Commission added powers.

Addressing association members from the central states, Hall said there was danger of the SEC being regarded as "investment counsellor to the nation."

"These two bills would add burdensome expense to financing and working out of reorganizations, as well as to the government," he said, "and I very much hope that Congress will weigh carefully the costs and disadvantages of this legislation against the possible benefits."

Comments of Brokers

With a difficult labor situation and the question of maintaining profit margins I rather doubt that the automobile stocks will do much marketwise over the next month or two and from a trading standpoint would prefer the oils, farm equipments or rubbers.—J. S. Wilson, Jo-sephthal & Co.

We look for the current testing period to be concluded in a constructive manner, thus bringing a step nearer the time when increased attention can be expected to be directed toward issues favorably situated to respond to a revival of confidence in the market's position. Watch U. S. Steel. —J. E. Molloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

We feel that the action of the market is likely to be governed almost entirely by labor developments over the near future.—E. A. Pierce & Co.

So many issues have either been "making a line" or have "worked into a coil", that a general movement of prices out of these ruts seems to lie nearby. —H. D. Comer, Paine, Webber & Co.

The coppers are unlikely to continue their better than average action unless there is a reversal of price abroad.—G. M., P. Murphy & Co.

There is nothing immediately ahead to bring any volume of new liquidation so that continued quiet, narrow market remains in prospect. Under such condition only a trading position is warranted.—J. P. Maher, Shields & Co.

We see no particular reason for disturbing intermediate swing commitments in deserving equities. From a more immediate viewpoint, continued absence of stimulating news could well result in further irregular drift but lower levels would, so we feel, attract a good grade of absorption.—J. S. Bache & Co.

WARM Weather Aids TRADE

N. E. AREA UP 10 TO 16 P. C.

New York, June 11 (AP)—The abrupt arrival of warm weather stepped up the tempo of trade this week with many retailers reporting the largest sales thus far in 1937, Dun & Bradstreet reported today in the weekly review.

Sales of summer clothing took the lead in merchandising promotions, the agency said, adding that the sudden demand for seasonal merchandise was reflected in wholesale markets by recorders, which indicated the inadequacy of retailers' stocks.

Labor difficulties in some industries, notably steel, threw production totals out of gear in the industrial division, although average operations in other lines changed little, the resume noted.

"In all the leading cities," the summary stated, "sales moved strongly upward from the previous week's total, except at strike affected centers, the average gain running from 4 to 8 per cent. The estimated volume, taking the country as a whole, was 10 to 20 per cent more than the same 1936 week."

PERCENTAGE GAINS

Percentage increases over last year in the major geographic areas were: New England, 10 to 16; east, 12 to 25; middlewest, 12 to 20; northwest, 15 to 23; south, 19 to 32; southwest, 15 to 25, Pacific Coast, 10 to 22.

In the heavy industries, the report said, chemical plants are at capacity. Machine shops, oil tool makers, and the air conditioning and airplane industries remain at previous high rates of production. Manufacture of automobile parts has yet to be reduced by more than a minor degree, despite the approach of the period for change over the new models.

Leaning more definitely to the unfavorable side of the picture was the building industry which reflected the usual seasonal let-down in activity, enhanced somewhat by rising costs of materials.

Renewed Pressure on French Franc Again Features

New York, June 11 (INS)—Renewed pressure on the French franc counteracted by operations of both the London and Paris control funds again featured the foreign exchange market today.

Heavy flow of capital from France has been resumed this week as fears grew that the government would be unable to finance itself through the summer by orthodox means. The slump in rentes has indicated that the capital market will be a difficult source to tap. The foreign exchange market is badly impressed by the reduction to below 300 million francs in the treasury balance with the Bank of France as against three billion 600 million two months ago, following the defense loan.

Currencies were little changed. The British pound held at $4.93 7-16; the French franc at 4.45 cents, up ⅛ point; the belga at 16.88, up 1; the Swiss franc at 22.87½, up 2½, and the guilder at 55.00, up 1. Scandinavian currencies were lower.

The London gold price rose ½ penny to 140 shilling 7½ pence an ounce. The U. S. equivalent fell 2 cents to $34.69, while the Paris price was boosted to 25.046 francs per kilo from 25,029 yesterday.

Reece Company Dividends

Reece Button Hole Machine Co., declared a regular quarterly dividend of 20 cents a share and an "extra" of 20 cents, both payable July 1 to stock of record June 15. The last "extra" paid by the company was in December, 1936, and that was also 20 cents.

International Button Hole Sewing Machine Co. declared a dividend of 30 cents a share, payable July 1 to stock of record June 15. The latter was the same amount as in the previous quarter when a regular quarterly dividend of 20 cents and an "extra" of 10 cents were paid.

Offering 6 Times Oversubscribed

Washington June 11 (INS)—Acting Secretary of the Treasury Wayne C. Taylor announced today the treasury's recent offering of $800,000,000 in notes was oversubscribed six times. The issue was split into $400,000,000 in 1⅜ per cent notes and $400,000,000 in 1⅞ per cent notes.

Foreign Trade Views of I. B. M. Head Studied

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1937, By Universal Service)

New York, June 11—It is the custom of notables on incoming steamers to let down their hair and talk freely to the reporters.

The able Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines Corporation, returning recently from Europe, expressed some interesting opinions about foreign trade. Incidentally, Mr. Watson's company, with its exclusive patents, has a very sizable export outlet.

"Foreign trade," Mr. Watson said, "may be expected to play an increasing part in reducing our tax requirements by furnishing employment to American workingmen. It is aided by trade agreements which lower barriers to the free exchange of goods and services."

It is an open question whether the American reciprocal trade policy of reducing tariff protection is helping America's foreign trade position.

RECORD SINCE 1934

Although both imports and exports have risen since 1933 in accordance with world economic recovery, America's favorable balance of trade has been persistently whittled down since that time, and in the first four months of 1937 there has been a negative, or adverse balance of trade in merchandise of $132,062,000.

Moreover, in order to achieve even such unsatisfactory trade results, the United States government subsidized exports by buying at $35 an ounce an amount of foreign gold approximately equal to the total value of goods exported during that period.

To the extent that competitive merchandise comes in, American labor may be displaced, rather than employed.

The dollar figures do not tell the whole story. The situation in man hours displaced is even more adverse.

With American wages much higher than those prevailing in other countries, a given amount of imports displaces more American workers than would be the case if foreign merchandise embraced as high labor costs.

Likewise, in the gold imports the trade gave employment to workers in South Africa, Russia and elsewhere, rather than in the United States.

NONCOMPETITIVE IMPORTS

To the extent that non-competitive imports come in, the foreign trade is useful and desirable.

But foreign trade at any price is not necessarily desirable.

At a time when there is considerable unemployment at home, the competitive import which displaces American workers is likely to be anti-social. It is also uneconomic, since the displaced workers become a charge on the American taxpayer, more than offsetting any seeming economy in buying cheaper products from countries embracing coolie labor standards.

Where science and invention, as in Mr. Watson's company, produce unique and extraordinary products, there is a justification for active trade in such items across national boundaries. But in the case of routine products, free trade with low-living standard countries constitutes a threat against superior American levels. Such competitive trade is all the less desirable in periods of unemployment.

PURCHASING POWER

Prior to the depression in our uncritical struggle for exports we tended to give away goods through providing foreign purchasing power in the form of partially uncollectible foreign loans.

Such business was not profitable for the American economy as a whole.

In the last three years there has been a similar building up of foreign purchasing power here through our policy of needlessly accumulating surplus and unwanted gold.

Instead of whooping it up for foreign trade in general, we ought to approach the subject realistically, and demand such selective imports as are helpful to the internal economy of the United States.

Bumper Wheat Crop Seen by Experts

They estimated on the basis of June 1 conditions that this year's yield would total between 825,000,000 and 850,000,000 bushels, compared with 626,461,000 bushels last year.

The 941,674,000-bushel yield of 1931 was the last to reach such proportions.

Althought stem rust has been noticed in the wheat fields of Kansas and Nebraska, the experts said "the infection is not severe as yet." Any material damage to the winter crop will be limited to late wheat, they added.

Their estimate for winter wheat was 648,597,000 bushels, compared with 519,013,000 bushels last year. Acreage intentions point to a spring wheat crop of between 175,000,000 and 200,000,000 bushels, compared with 107,488,000 bushels last year.

Acreage plans and the conditions of crops now growing indicate, they added, that "the outlook is for about average production of the principal food, feed and forage crops."

Segal Lock Orders Increase

Backlog of orders on books of Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc., totaled $534,000 June 1, against $407,325 a year ago, a gain of 23 per cent, President Segal announced.

"Despite the fact our plant in Norwalk was closed for about four weeks due to a strike, shipments in first five months gained 15 per cent over like 1936 period," he said. "The plant in Brooklyn, which has been shut since start of the depression is now being reopened."

Living Cost Up During May

Living costs for wage earners in May increased substantially, the National Industrial Conference Board states. The gain was put at 0.8 per cent over April and 6 per cent over a year ago.

Food rose 1.1 from April to May, rents by the same amount, clothing 0.8 per cent and sundries 0.2 per cent, the board reported.

DEATH NOTE UNSOLVED MYSTERY

screen in such pictures as "Beast of the City," "Goldie" and "The Secret Six."

When Jean made "Red-Headed Woman," Paul Bern was the associate producer of the picture. It was a time of rebellion for Jean—rebellion against being typed as "the Platinum Blonde" and rebellion against the playing the same kind of siren in picture after picture.

Bern talked to her gently. He told her she must not play any other kind of role; that it just wouldn't do for her to try to become a blonde Janet Gaynor or a second Mary Pickford.

He knew why the public spent their money to see Jean Harlow and for the sake of her career he knew there should not be too radical a change in her type of role.

Pair Fall in Love

She became too more fond of Paul Bern and before "Red-Headed Woman" was completed they had fallen in love.

He taught the career Jean many things, and among them he taught her to enjoy people and parties and conversation.

Went she tend to her friends about Paul she said:

"He taught me to share his enjoyment of society. But Paul was not always socially inclined. Very often we'd spend quiet evenings in my mother's home, just sitting and talking before the fire. It was on those evenings that I learned to know his fine intelligence, his understanding and brilliant imagination."

Jean Harlow and Paul Bern were married on June 2 1932 in a quiet ceremony at the home of her mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Marino Bello.

Jean, radiantly lovely as a bride, believed she had found happiness. As a wedding gift Bern presented his young wife with a beautiful home in Beverly Hills, and there they spent their brief honeymoon.

Jean was visiting her mother less than two months after her marriage when she heard over the telephone the news of Bern's suicide.

Suicide Tragedy

It was a cruel, unexplainable tragedy. It must have seemed to Jean that the whole world pounced upon her trying to ferret out the secret of Bern's suicide note.

But all Jean said was:

"I can't understand it. We were happy and we loved each other. Our marriage was ideal. I had begun to realize for the first time in my life, what happiness could mean."

And again she said:

"The years ahead of us seemed to promise such beauty. Paul, from the depths of his experience and understanding, had so much to give me. I looked to him for advice and wise council and I clung to his love."

But what did Paul Bern mean when he wrote of "the frightful wrong I have done you" and "you understand that last night was only a comedy"?

If Jean Harlow knew Paul Bern's secret, she told no one, and to this day it remains a mystery.

2 LIFEGUARDS ASSIGNED TO CHARLESBANK

Despite the fact that the city appropriations for lifeguards at beaches are onlyl for the period from June 15 to September 15, Park Commissioner William P. Long today assigned two temporary lifeguards to Charlesbank Beach, where two sisters drowned Wednesday.

The lifeguards will be on temporary duty until next Tuesday when the regular season opens and the regular lifeguards are assigned to all beaches, including the Charlesbank, one o fthe most dangerous under Boston control.

COMMISSIONER GRIEVED

Drowning of Doris and Elizabeth O'Rourke of Lincoln street, Charlestown, 12-year-old twins, deeply grieved the park commissioner and he assigned the temporary guards, he said, in response to the call of his own heart and to public demand.

"I'll scrape up the money to pay them somewhere," said the commissioner.

Not only did he post the lifeguards, but he sent engineers to the beach to make soundings and discover at just what points the beach shelves off most sharply.

At Charlesbank, in many spots, after a depth of five feet is reached out from the beach shore, the bottom drops off sharply, making the bech dangerous for non-swimmers or persons who easily lose their presence of mind and become panicky.

The commissioner will try to have this condition corrected, he said.

NO MONEY AVAILABLE

He also sent several loads of sand to the beach.

Within a week, the two sisters and a young boy have been drowned, but no money has been made available for lifeguards before June 15 at Boston beaches.

This money [illegible] maintains each year despite the fact that many children use the beaches from the first warm days in May.

Romance in Museum Will Lead Boston Art Teacher to the Altar

MISS POTE WILL BE BRIDE

The coming marriage of a pretty Dorchester High School art instructor to a Milk street broker and Harvard graduate, climaxing a romance that started in the museum of a Back Bay club, was revealed today.

The bride-to-be is winsome Miss Marguerite M. Pote, talented young Belmont artist and art teacher at Dorchester High School for girls.

Her fiance is Gordon B. Hanlon, 29-year-old stock broker, member of the Stock Exchange and a graduate of both Harvard Law and Business Schools.

Miss Pote confirmed the report of her approaching marriage and then added:

"We've only been engaged two days. It came as a surprise to many of our friends."

HAPPENED SUDDENLY

"It all happened so suddenly it's hard to realize it's really true," she went on.

"I met Gordon little less than a year ago at the art galleries of the Boston Art Club on Newbury street where I was exhibiting some paintings. Since that time we've been going together, visiting the galleries, riding in the Blue Hills and at Concord.

"Suddenly we decided to become engaged. We had to work fast because a number of Gordon's friends are from out west and will be going home soon."

But that [illegible] no definite date as yet. And their plans for a honeymoon are a bit pretty vague. But one thing she admitted was pretty swell to be engaged.

Hanlon is living at [illegible] Hall at the Harvard Business school where he has been doing special research work for two years. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Hanlon of [illegible]

ANN MARSTERS In Hollywood • A NEW SERIES

THIS IS LIFE

By

Robert E. Rogers

An esteemed and distinguished contemporary has been opening its correspondence columns of [illegible] a long series of letters pro and con Margaret Mitchell's super best-seller "Gone With the Wind," recently awarded the Pulitzer Prize. [illegible]

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The [illegible] started [illegible] criticizing Miss Mitchell's grammar, usage, diction and the proof-reading of the publishing company. That perhaps is not particularly important. Boston seems to be full of ex-proofreaders, precise [illegible] ladies of certain age who still [illegible] good usage in English must be preserved [illegible] in the gay nineties and who [illegible] consider that the [illegible] move [illegible]

Misfortunes Of a Manuscript

I once had a book published, written very [illegible] in the vernacular, of which the galley proofs were returned to me corrected evidently by a lady who had been brought up exclusively on Matthew Arnold, Robert Louis Stevenson and Hamilton Wright Mabie. The lady [illegible] had gone over my proofs [illegible] changing [illegible] into modern colloquial [illegible] English of 1887, [illegible] attempts at modern slang and generally [illegible] up my English. The result looked like the writing of an honor student in English who had just entered M. I. T. with the benediction of an English teacher who combined all the worst features of Barrett Wendell, Quiller-Couch, Vizetelly and the Fowler Brothers with none of their virtues.

One [illegible] of the scene in Cranford when Miss [illegible] after listening with horror to Mr. [illegible] Peters insisted on [illegible] Dr. Samuel Johnson's "Rasselas." That kind [illegible] means less than nothing [illegible]

Veterans Themselves Not So Sensitive

But more seriously the ardent correspondents are now combining to jump on Margaret Mitchell as an inaccurate historian, as a pro-southerner and a constructive traitor, "writer of a very harmful and disloyal book."

Exactly that, forsooth. It rather makes one gag.

It reminds one of those die-hards who bob up once in so often to protest against returning captured battle colors to the southern veterans or something of the sort. A year ago some Sons of Union Veterans protested against Technology's accepting a gift of a portrait of Robert E. Lee! It is only fair to say that such goings-on are not usually initiated by the veterans themselves but by the Sons of Veterans or the Ladies of Relief Corps more patriotic than the men who actually fought for the [illegible]

I have very little patience with these professional Union patriots who object to a Civil War novel laid in the South written by a second or third generation southern woman because it exhibits a southern point of view. In the name of common sense what point of view could it or should it represent?

Agrees With Author On Reconstruction

These folks who are writing letters apparently believe that [illegible] Siege of Atlanta and March [illegible] to exalt the Union [illegible] Disloyal! I ask you! I take [illegible] [illegible] Margaret Mitchell's in "Gone With the Wind" [illegible] History [illegible] government.

Comeback Staged by Roland

Ann Marsters has returned from Hollywood where she spent several weeks gathering material for her new Hollywood series. The articles appear daily in the Boston Evening American and the Sunday Advertiser.

Today Miss Marsters brings you the story of the dramatic comeback to the cinema heights of Gilbert Roland, one-time star of the silent films.

Boston Evening American Staff Writer

CHAPTER 19

Hollywood, Cal.

Now, let's consider Gilbert Roland.

In the silent days he was the dashing hero of several notable pictures, but, with the coming of the talkies, he might have faded from the screen, as did so many silent stars, like Charlie Farrell and the late John Gilbert.

Roland, however, didn't give up. He remained in Hollywood and kept very much in the social swim.

He always seemed to have plenty of money. He never pleaded with a single producer to give him a job.

There's a saying that goes: "Nothing succeeds like success in Hollywood." And Roland proved that it's true.

Able to Dictate

Because he stayed in Hollywood, stayed in the consciousness of the producers, went to the best parties, appeared to be very prosperous and happy, he was the first person to be considered for a principal role in one of Paramount's big pictures, "Last Train from Madrid," directed by Jimmy Hogan of Lowell, Mass., and he was able to dictate his own terms in [illegible] for his services.

As for the future, Paramount [illegible] more plans and more parts for Gilbert Roland. He is stepping [illegible] back to the important post [illegible] he held as a silent star.

Roland, on the set of "Last Train From Madrid," did not talk about his "comeback," because he takes it as a matter of course.

He talked, instead, about bull fighting.

"I've always regretted," he said, "that I didn't become a bull fighter instead of an actor. It is the most vital, fascinating sport in the world."

Boyhood Ambition

Roland scoffed at our suggestion that it was also a cruel sport.

"Americans think that," he said, "because they have no understanding of it. But even the most squeamish American woman would grow to love it if she had the opportunity of watching it and learning what it was all about."

As a boy, Roland expected to become a bull fighter.

"My father," he said, "was a famous Spanish matador in his day, and my grandfather and great-grandfather were matadors, too. My own training for the profession began when I was ten years old."

But Roland had a yearning to see the world, so he left his native Spain when he was 13 years old.

"I landed in Mexico with $40 in my pocket," he said. "I had to earn some money, in some way, so I took a trip to Hollywood to see if they needed any ambitious bull fighters."

But Hollywood was indifferent to bull fighters and it didn't seem to care, either, that it had a handsome young man in its midst whose money was speedily dwindling away.

"I managed to get a little work as a movie extra," Roland went

ANN MARSTERS GILBERT ROLAND

Gilbert Roland, one-time star in silent films, who has won his way back into the movies, tells Ann Marsters, Boston girl reporter, of his ambition—to fight bulls! Unlike many other screen players, Roland succeeded in climbing back into film prominence merely by biding his time and never begging for a job or complaining. He is shown here with Miss Marsters on the set of "Last Train from Madrid," in which he started his comeback on the Paramount lot.

Silent Film Star Wins Place

on, "and so did a few other people like Joan Crawford, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. We were all just one unhappy family of extras."

After nearly two years of that precarious life Roland became discouraged and decided to go back to his country—where men are matadors.

Couldn't Go Home

"But I didn't have enough money to buy passage," said Roland, "so I wandered around Hollywood for a few more weeks, trying to raise some money."

It was then that Norma Talmadge saw him. Her studio had been searching for the right type of actor to play "Armand" in her "Camille."

Norma happened to notice Gilbert when he was helping to supply atmosphere to a mob scene.

So she went to the studio executives and announced, "I've found Armand!"

Roland, as you can understand, still remembers that day even though it was ten years ago.

"I was sitting down, between scenes, with a group of extras," he said, "and suddenly the director pointed his finger at me and said something like 'Hey you.' I walked over to him, expecting to be called down for something. Instead, he told me I was wanted at the front office."

The next day, Gilbert Roland was placed under contract, and the following week he began rehearsing with Norma Talmadge for "Camille."

Reached Heights

Such is the way careers are made. Roland continued to play important parts as one of the most romantic screen lovers, and he was at the height of his popularity when he appeared in "Beau Geste."

With the advent of sound pictures, he began to play less important roles—but Roland didn't appear to worry about it.

He spent a lot of his time playing tennis with his best friends, Ronald Colman and Fredric March. And he acquired the reputation of being one of the best tennis players in Hollywood.

In the future, he will have less time to play tennis. He'll be at the Paramount studio working before the cameras.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By

Ann Marsters

There is an army of special technical directors, in Hollywood, who represent practically every race on the face of the globe.

ANN MARSTERS

They are called for consultation only on motion pictures with a foreign locale. And their jobs are of infinite detail.

In the first place, they must guard American directors and players against errors in dress, customs, local geography, business and industrial practice, home decoration and a thousand and one other points.

They must watch, too, idioms of speech despite the fact that the lines are spoken in English.

These advisers must be men of education, travel, and with knowledge and experience. And they are, in their way, quite indispensable in the making of movies.

They receive high salaries for their services—and recently, several Chinese advisors made a small fortune in the production of "The Good Earth."

Screen Villain Fears Sea Role

An actor, named Trevor Bardett, whose villainy was magnificent in "The Deep South," was offered a nice part in "The Windjammer" with George O'Brien.

Producer Mervyn LeRoy turned over a script to the actor who returned the next day apologetically saying he couldn't play the role.

"Why not?" inquired LeRoy.

"Well," replied Bardett, "I have a peculiar idiosyncrasy: I'm scared to death of ships. I get seasick just looking at them, and your picture has nothing but ships."

"Why didn't you say so last night when I gave you the script," said LeRoy. "I told you it was a sea picture."

"That's right," said Bardett, "but I misunderstood you. I thought you were referring to the grade of production—you know, A pictures, B pictures—C pictures."

Wes Ferrell On Way Out | Sox Will Benefit By Latest Trade

By JACK CONWAY

I THINK THE Sox trade of Wes and Rick Ferrell and Mel Almada for Ben Chapman and "Buck" Newsom of the Senators was a good one for Tom Yawkey's club.

Mr. Boston

Wes Ferrell ended his days of usefulness to the Sox last season when he put his personal wishes above the best interests of the club. Instead of being fined and suspended, he should have been traded or sold.

No major league ball club or any other athletic outfit can expect to succeed if the temperament of any so-called star is to come before the best interests of the team.

I also believe Wes Ferrell is on the way out as a first class pitcher. He has shown very little hurling form this year. When a temperamental player begins to slip, he loses confidence in himself, and it is usually not long before he is out of the high places in sports.

Rick Ferrell will be missed by the Sox. He didn't rate as a backstop with Mickey Cochrane or Gabby Hartnett, but he was far above the average catcher. He usually caught 125 games a season, and in addition to being a good receiver is a .300 hitter.

Rick also had to take many shocks as a result of the child-like flair-ups of Brother Wes.

I don't consider Mel Almada a top major league ball player. He goes well in flashes, but will never startle anybody by his play over a long period of time. He is a handy fellow to have around in view of the fact he can play first base as well as the outfield.

Almada always gave his best efforts to the Sox, and the fans will wish him well with the Senators.

NEWSOM SEEKS BASEBALL ACTION

I WIRED "BUCK" Newsom in St. Louis asking him how he felt about joining the Red Sox.

"I shall give my best efforts every time I go to the mound for the Red Sox," wired Newsom. Joe Cronin will find me right in step with his managerial judgment.

"I always did like Joe. He's a grand fellow, and all I am going to ask of him is that he give me plenty of work.

"A pitcher cannot win a game sitting on the bench or warming up in the bull-pen. I crave action on the firing line. Tell the Boston fans I am in great shape."

In response to my wire, Chapman sent the following reply:

"I am in good condition, and will do my best to put the Red Sox back into the pennant race.

"I have no bitterness toward Bucky Harris or Clark Griffith for trading me to Boston. I know I shall enjoy playing for Tom Yawkey and Joe Cronin."

* * *

CHAPMAN IN RIGHT FIELD

EDDIE COLLINS informs me Chapman will play right field for the Sox. Cramer will remain in center field, while Mills will cover left field. This will give the Sox the strongest outfield they have had in several years

Collins believes the trade has strengthened the Sox. It has given the club one of the best pitchers in the league, and also a brilliant outfielder.

Even though Newsom and Chapman have their share of temperament they should prove of value to the Sox.

I like athletes possessing temperament provided they can control it. In the case of Wes Ferrell, he couldn't control his temperament. The natural fire within him became a detriment rather than a help to him.

I know Boston and New England baseball fans would like to see the latest trade aid the Sox in securing victories. Tom Yawkey has certainly given enough to Boston baseball to be rewarded by a winning team.

You'll find me at Fenway Park rooting for Chapman and Newsom and Chapman to play their best games.

McCOY BUILDING FOR SPEED

BILL BRENNAN was a caller at this office, and told me Al McCoy is building for speed in the closing days of his training for his ten-round bout with Natie Brown of Washington at Fenway Park on Monday night.

"McCoy is the best 15-round boxer in the heavyweight division," said Brennan. "Al doesn't tire and, more important, doesn't lose the power of his punch as a match progresses. Most heavyweights cannot knock your hat off after the sixth round.

"McCoy's only fistic fault has been slow starting. In the past it has taken him two or three rounds to get going on high. This is why he has been training for speed for his coming tussle with Brown.

"Al is anxious to win by a knockout in five or six rounds, and he knows that if he is to accomplish this result he will have to start at top speed in the first round."

The Wild Bull of the Pampas was down five times in the opening round, while Dempsey was on the deck twice. In the second round Firpo went down twice, the second knockdown putting him out of the picture.

Incidentally, Dempsey rates McCoy as the best of the young heavyweights. Jack told me in Florida last winter that McCoy would be a cinch to knock out Joe Louis with punches to the head.

Brae Burn Pro Tied for Lead With Snead

By WARREN BROWN

Birmingham, Mich., June 11 (US)—Booming golf shots that had their origin in the hills of West Virginia, flattened out the par figures of Oakland Hills in the opening round of the national open golf championship.

The P. G. A. champion, Densmore Shute, and the reigning sensation of the younger set, Sam Snead, led a field of 168 [illegible] through the first round [illegible] to be tied with identical [illegible] 69 cards at the end of a [illegible] and wearisome day.

S[illegible] his golf as an [illegible] West Virginia many [illegible] and now doing pro duty [illegible] Brae Burn C. C., West Newton, [illegible] home in the late afternoon with a birdie four on the last [illegible] to equal the score of Snead, [illegible] out of West Virginia [illegible] down White Sulphur Springs [illegible].

Of the two, Shute's round showed the lesser struggle.

[illegible] the second hole [illegible] enough going toward [illegible] dubbed one shot [illegible] the rough, sent another [illegible] the green and finally had [illegible] to settle for a six.

MANERO OUTSIDE ELECT

[illegible] this youngster, most spectacular professional to arise in several years, went on from there [illegible] one thrilling shot to another [illegible] heading home, he beat a shot from far out on the fairway [illegible] from the pin at No. 18 and sank the putt for an eagle [illegible] gave him the lead unchal[illegible] Shute's arrival.

[illegible] heroics of Snead [illegible] good enough to [illegible] first round [illegible] comfort for either [illegible] five shots of them [illegible] 35 of the [illegible] of 168 that had [illegible]

That's what happened when the golfers in congress assembled started out to do something about the championship that was presumed to be defended by Tony Manero of Salem, Mass., whose 282 a year ago furnished a new open record.

PICARD WELL UP

Their company might have been even greater but for the fact that Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., via Plymouth, Mass., missed a dinky putt on the home green, and had to be content with a par-shattering 71, along with Mike Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., Fred Morrison, Pasadena, Cal., and Ralph Guldahl, Chicago.

But if we are to go into that, there was Ted Longworth, Port[illegible] [illegible] suddenly of the chance to have found himself up there waiting for Snead and Shute to come along and tie him, instead of settling for a par 72. But Ted wasn't lonesome, or was he in company that wasn't [illegible]ous.

And Harold "Jug" McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., had a 74.

So many and so formidable were the number of the starting field who did things to par figures that the boys were positively sneering at scores that went over 72.

But in the making of them, as well as in the production of lower figures, the inevitable run of oddities persisted.

SARAZEN EAGLES

Bob Stupple of Chicago fired an iron shot for 200 yards into the cup for an eagle at the 14th.

Bobby Cruickshank dropped his tee shot at the 17th into the cup and saw the thing bounce out. He's still carrying the ball with a black smudge on it, indicating where it had clicked against the bottom of the cup.

Gene Sarazen, far behind the pace setters, came very, very close to duplicating his memorable "double eagle" of Augusta golfing history when he blasted a wood shot his second to within inches of the pin at the long eighth and took an eagle easily.

Leo Martin Defends Country Club Cup

Defeated His Twin, Eddie, in Final Round Last Year

By BILL GRIMES

As [illegible] competing in the [illegible] qualifying round of the annual Country Club Cup tournament today at Brookline.

The Country Club Cup has been in competition for many years. It has been won by the greatest golfers of this section, including Francis Ouimet, Billy McPhail, Joe Lynch and the current defending champion, Leo Martin, Sandy Burr.

A year ago the Martin twins, Leo and Edward, went through an unusually fast field to reach the finals.

Leo was the runner-up to Wilfred Crossley in the qualifying [illegible] with a 7[illegible] and started [illegible] with a [illegible] over [illegible] Peterson, Oakley. In the second round he eliminated Alan [illegible] The Country Club. Then in the semifinals, he defeated Crossley, 2 and 1.

In the meantime, his twin Edward was stepping along through the upper half of the draw with equal success.

Eddie put Bobby Goodale, Winchester, out of the running in the opening round, 3 and 2, and that afternoon he went 19 holes to beat Eddie Stimpson, former amateur champion of the state.

Since they have been playing big time golf, Leo has displayed a slight edge over Edward.

They are both terrific hitters off the tees and through the fairways. They are remarkably fine iron shot makers, with Eddie a trifle more accurate, and they are good, if not exactly sensational putters.

The Martins, either or both, are liable at any time to crash through to the top in some state, New England or national championship.

They have the ability to go places, and one of these days one of them will get the necessary breaks and become nationally famous.

Leo has been offered a [illegible] with a wholesale clothing manufacturer and, if he accepts, he will locate in New York.

There were 43 entries in the qualifying round of The Country Club cup tournament last year, and it's predicted that the field will be considerably larger today.

Among the out of state entries are Archibald and Bailey [illegible] from Onwentsia [illegible] and Charles Bellows, M[illegible].

CASCAPEDIA IS SUFFOLK STANDOUT

RATES Cascapedia AT TOP

By DAVE WILSON

Selections for Fast Track:
BEST BET—CASCAPEDIA, 5th RACE

Suffolk Downs, June 11—Cascapedia, necked out by Bubblesome in his Agawam final, should come right back to triumph over seven less capable opponents in the $1500 Beacon Claiming Handicap, mile and one-sixteenth feature here today.

FIRST—Bob C., Grand Light Folk Dance

BOB C., a Transmute gelding trained by astute George Arvin strikes me as a "good thing" in this claiming event for maiden juveniles. GRAND LIGHT and FOLK DANCE are both on the also eligible list and may not get postwards. They figure as named.

SECOND—Takus, Glynna, Consistent

TAKUS, pitted too highly in $2000 company the other day should experience little difficulty in turning back weak opposition in this $1250 top and $1000 bottom claimer. Contention if any, may be furnished by Glynna. The latter finished a distant third to Nipantuck and High Voltage in his last race. CONSISTENT, dead short in last race, may improve enough to save show honors.

THIRD—Potiphar, Unfurl, Sugaboot

POTIPHAR finished fifth to Foolem, Prosecutor, Custer and All Rowes in his last race, but the charts reveal that he was beaten only a trifle over two lengths for the important money. If the Sands colorbearer is ever going to win a race it should surely happen here. UNFURL forced the torrid early pace in the above-mentioned race, but retired gradually after three-eighths as if dead short. May hang on better here. SUGABOOT is really the class, but he has been away since Florida.

FOURTH—Square, Lucky Color, Eddie Helck.

SQUARE, a Sickle filly, has been idle since May 10, at Narragansett, where she finished a distant third to Harp o' Gold and Nigrette. Five panels in 1:01 under double wraps served as a final. LUCKY COLOR was away slow in his last race, but closed a big gap to finish a bangup third to Royal Bird and Dedication.

FIFTH—Cascapedia, Don Guzman, Likewise

CASCAPEDIA will probably have DON GUZMAN to beat for major honors. The latter forced a dazzling early pace for a bit over three-quarters in the Massasoit Handicap last Saturday, but tired badly in the stretch drive to finish next to last. LIKEWISE stepped a mile in 1:40 to lead home Buster B. and other $2500 platers in his last race. He looks next best.

SIXTH—Beautiful, Maestrom, Sun Pilot

BEAUTIFUL, with capable Johnny Barba in the saddle, is picked to reverse the tables on MAESTROM. The latter drubbed the top selection by a narrow margin in their last meeting, but Beautiful appeared to be none too well ridden that day. SUN PILOT, dropping down from allowance numbers is the reported "good thing."

SEVENTH—Starwick, Oddesa Boy, Zor

STARWICK, a hard-hitting Westwick filly, is meeting little more than she drubbed in her last race. Phil Bieber's charge stepped a mile and one-sixteenth that day to easily lead home Donald Duck and others. ODDESA BOY pitted too highly in recent tests, figures close on his lone victory at the meeting.

EIGHTH — Texline, Medius Dies, Harry's Dream.

TEXALINE, a bangup third to Maestrom and Beautiful, in last race, needs only to duplicate that good effort to insure brackets. MEDIUS DIES, if not too sore, figures close up in what appears to be strictly a two-horse race. HARRY'S DREAM will be dangerous only in the event of mud. She's a five star mudder in my book.

Don Goes Down

New York, June 11—Pitcher Don Brennan, a Georgetown alumnus has been sold by the Cincinnati Reds to the New York Giants. He will be farmed to Jersey City.

Another Trio For Cohen

Add three more winners to the fast growing list of Sam Cohen, Boston Evening American dog selector at Wonderland Park, Revere.

Eva Glide, top choice in the third race, came home nicely to return $8.80; Smart Traffice led the way in the seventh, paying $7, and Chief's Darling captured the ninth and gave her supporters $9 for a $2 win investment.

Strawberry, second choice in the second race, came through to win the event.

Pick Speedy James On Post Position

By SAM COHEN

BEST BET—SPEEDY JAMES, THIRD

Speedy James, nicely spotted on the outside with an indifferent field in the Wonderland third race tonight, easily shapes up as the best bet on the card.

The eighth race feature, though, shapes up as a very evenly fought affair. Reba Nell, returning to the "hot box" after her great tenth race two nights back, gets the call due to her great stretch running. The choice must show early foot against this class or the verdict may go to the Rural Crier.

FIRST RACE—FUTURITY
CURROW KERRY, ROUGH NECK BOY, DON J.

P P	Name, Owner	Wts.	P Odds
1	Currow Kerry, Dan Cahill	65½	5-2
3	Rough Neck Boy, D. Allen	56½	4-1
2	Don J., Gus Males	70	6-1
6	[illegible], Dennis Leahy	46	6-1
7	Final Jack, Sid Manor	65	8-1
4	Get Gone, M. E. Highouse	64	10-1
5	Cladder River, Ruth Browne	55	9-1
8	Running Alf, Arch Detzer	56	5-1

CURROW KERRY has enough foot and rail running knowledge to pop down in front in this opener. ROUGH NECK BOY has beaten better and might reverse the order of things. DON J. is in very light and should be right in the middle of it.

SECOND RACE—MAIDENS' FUTURITY
J. R. W., STRAW FOOT, YOUNG GANGSTER

4	J. R. W., R. E. Randle	66	4-1
5	Straw Foot, John Miles	56½	5-1

6	Lone Cavalier, Dan Cahill	60	8-1
1	Raid the Roost, Arch Detzer	61	10-1
3	Cave Springs, H. E. Alderson	60	10-1

J. R. W. gets the call in this maiden event. His last two efforts have been worthy and comes from a smart kennel. STRAW FOOT didn't show anything last out, but disregard that. YOUNG GANGSTER comes wheeling home with plenty of speed and should get up in time.

THIRD RACE—5-16 MILE
SPEEDY JAMES, LADY RED, JUST SHOW EM

8	Speedy James, Gus Males	61	[illegible]
4	Lady Red, John Allen	52	5-1

SPEEDY JAMES should have [illegible] repeat in this spot [illegible] The [illegible] appears to be [illegible] and he has [illegible] LADY RED rates [illegible] here and should improve. JUST SHOW EM, which takes the overland route, may get up in time for show.

5	Electric Wave, Cherry Val. Ken.	50	8-1

FAME should be able to break into that winner's circle tonight. UNTOLD got into a little trouble in her last out but should give the field quite a little competition. PROPHET could take all of this, as he looks as though he is beginning to turn on the heat.

4	Clarke, M. F. Alderson	64	10-1
2	Dr. Mike, Charles Hall	52	8-1

TROT, which is a very smart rail runner and has quite a bit of foot, is nicely placed and should get her nose over that line in front. BITTER CREEK proved he is ready. Plus [illegible] he [illegible] the outside. JUST NOODLE should be able to get up in time.

Let Them Play

Springfield, June 11—Dr. James A. Naismith, who invented basketball in 1892, pleaded with the coaches at a basketball symposium at Springfield College to "give the game back to the boys." It is too mechanized, he said. Dr. Naismith is an alumnus of Springfield College.

TERRY Pays Well for HOMERS

MONTANEZ JEOPARDIZED

By Associated Press

Mark it down in the book as a coincidence if you want to, but just as Jimmy Braddock entered Washington Park race track the other day they announced Ebony Boy (a red hot favorite) had just been beaten by Miss Pittypat, a $28.20 long shot.

That's good enough for us, and what are the latest odds, Mr. Jack Doyle?

Hope Joe DiMaggio didn't see that Puerto Rican paper which ran a picture of Jack Wilson (230 lbs.) captioned: "Joe DiMaggio, Terrific Slugger of the New York Yankees."

Why do they let a fighter like Pedro Montanez (with one and Pedro two title shots just around the corner) risk broken hands and other injuries in bouts that can't possibly net him more than 12 or 15 hundred?

WORKING IN BREWERY

If the one and only Dizzy changes his mind about helping out in the all-star game, Bill Terry plans to use Mungo, Dean and Hubbell in that order . . . The beer that made Milwaukee famous may do the same for dear old Marquette . . . No fewer than 25 track, football and basketball stars are putting in a muscle-building summer working on the loading platforms.

There's gloom in Chicago since Mayor Kelly ordered the lid clamped down on all the bookmaking joints.

Flash! Bill Terry gave Harry Danning a fiver for hitting that winning homer against the Cards the other day. . . . It's just too bad for Madison Square Garden the Supreme Court is in recess until October.

Any day now the Pacific Coast conference will announce it has splurged itself to a permanent, full-time high-salaried commissioner—like Major Griffiths of the Big Ten . . . Was this guy hot or was he just tepid?

SCOUTS, ATTENTION!

Dave Nelson, catcher for the Canner A. C. team in the Detroit Baseball Federation, had 15 putouts, threw out two runners, got a homer, double and two singles in five times at bat, and stole third and home in one game, Sunday. Whew!

Out at Oakland Hills the caddies drew straws to see which would tote Champion Tony Manero's clubs in the open. . . . Winner was Jimmy McGuire, 14-year-old brother of the assistant pro at Oakland Hills.

They must have a whale of a boxing club down at Nanticoke, Pa. . . . Five of the 11 members of the American team which lost to Eire Wednesday night, were Nanticoke products. . . . Beers of Maryland blood, jumped against Beer of Virginia in a recent [illegible] meet.

Your agent is off today for Chicago, Kenosha and points west to give you the lowdown on Braddock and Louis starting Monday. . . . Choo, choo and toot, toot.

Soo-Nipi Lodge To Open June 26

Sports followers will welcome the news that the Soo-Nipi Lodge on Lake Sunapee will open June 26.

Mountain climbing, swimming, fishing and golfing will be easily available to sportlovers as the Soo-Nipi Lodge extends these summer activities to its patrons.

Tennis tournaments, sailing and speedboat regattas are also a feature of the popular summer colony.

Will Sanders, for 27 years foreman of Glenmore's fermenting room, says:

"For 27 years, I've been looking after these tubs. Always we run 'em the same. It's a slow process and the bubbles show how things are developing. We watch these tubs every minute. You can't take chances when you're making a whiskey as fine as Mint Springs."

Because Mint Springs is made of the same fine American grains and distilled by the same processes that produce the most expensive Bourbon whiskies—no part of the work is entrusted to inexperienced men.

When you buy Mint Springs, you get 550 years combined whiskey-making experience—the total number of years that Glenmore's 22 Key Men have been connected with the company. Mint Springs is distilled and bottled by Glenmore as the label proves.

GEORGE FAVORED IN GO WITH CLARK

TITANS CLASH ON GARDEN MAT

Ed Don George, twice holder of the world heavyweight title and now riding handsomely up the comeback trail, will rule a slight favorite over George (Dazzler) Clark, colorful Scotchman, in their headline bout at the Garden tonight. This show will windup the current indoor wrestling season.

George is liked because he is wrestling better today than at any time in his entire career, even including his two reigns as champion.

He has not been beaten in nearly two years, or since he lost to Dan O'Mahony in a bitter New York struggle shortly before he left on his trip around the world.

Since he has beaten topline matmen in each country he visited.

CLARK'S GREAT RECORD

Clark came to this country last October, has registered 67 victories and suffered only three defeats.

Two of his defeats were in matches with Steve (Crusher) Casey, the Irishman, and both were gruelling affairs. His other loss was to Dan O'Mahony. The Dazzler also has beaten and drawn with Danno.

JOHNSON VS. JIM WRIGHT

Tor Johnson, unbeaten and 365-pound Swede, takes on his toughest assignment here. He is paired with the clever and powerful Jim Wright, Rube's brother and just as fine a matman, in the semifinal. It will be Wright's debut here.

Wee Willie Davis, 305-pound Virginian, will have his hands full in the special bout. He collides with Jack Marshall, clever Coloradoan who gave O'Mahony hard going at the Garden recently.

Maurice Robert, Champion Yvon's brother, will make his American debut in the preliminary. He is paired with Tony Parkin of Buffalo, Ed George's training mate. Yvon will work in his brother's corner.

Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, Polish star who had beaten both Helen Jacobs and Alice Marble this season, reached the women's finals with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Nancy Lyle of England.

Fawn Leader Best Wager at Taunton

By MATTHEW KEANEY

BEST BET—FAWN LEADER, EIGHTH

Taunton, June 11—Frank Falk's Fawn Leader, which missed a shot at the money in its first outing here recently, is my pick to win the featured event tonight, the fifth of the Sportsmen's Park meeting at the Taunton dog track.

This pup has its work cut out but I firmly believe he will lead Major and Fu Manchu to the finish line. And his price shouldn't be too hard to take, either.

FIRST RACE—FUTURITY
REVIEW, OUR FEZ, GRACIE ALICE

P.P.	Name	Owner	Wt.	Odds
5	Review	J. Boone	56	7-2
4	Our Fez	H. Bagwell	61	4-1
1	Gracie Alice	P. Conway	57½	4-1
7	Rustling Rover	F. Palermo	58	6-1
8	Blue Balfa	O. Beckner	58½	6-1
2	Jumbo	J. Prevatt	65	8-1
6	White Dictator	C. Burnett	59	8-1
3	King Tigerlila	C. Shively	64	10-1

REVIEW was bothered in her last. In he event she breaks cleanly she should win handily. OUR FEZ and GRACIE ALICE appear the ones to furnish the chief contention.

SECOND RACE—5-16 MILE
MYSTIC SHRINE, YOU MISSED IT, COLUMBIA RIVER

P.P.	Name	Owner	Wt.	Odds
6	Mystic Shrine	H. Bagwell	64	7-2
5	You Missed It	G. Rogers	57½	7-2
8	Columbia River	Premier Ken	67	4-1
3	Noble Ben	W. Shallcross	68	6-1
7	She's a Gallant	J. Prevatt	59	8-1
1	Mariah	F. Stutz	66	8-1
2	Nelva Andrews	J. Fortier	64	10-1
4	Rosanna	F. Palermo	48	10-1

MYSTIC SHRINE is descending the scale and appears the right wagering prospect here. YOU MISSED IT needs plenty of room but should be second with COLUMBIA RIVER and NOBLE BEN batting for the rest.

THIRD RACE—¼ MILE
DUSTY DAN, FINAL LOCK, HOLLOW HEAD

P.P.	Name	Owner	Wt.	Odds
4	Dusty Dan	O. Dahlberg	69½	2-1
6	Final Lock	D. Sullivan	61	4-1
1	Hollow Head	P. Conway	55	5-1
7	True Heart	C. Looney	45	6-1
8	Blue Gale	O. Beckner	63½	6-1
5	Top Hill	Cedar Point Ken	54	8-1
2	Flight Leader	Premier Ken	62	8-1
3	Tina Life	J. Prevatt	62	10-1

The sprinting distance seems best suited for DUSTY DAN and it should score. FINAL LOCK, HOLLOW HEAD and TRUE HEART will be in the fight all the way.

FOURTH RACE—FUTURITY
JACK'S REJECTED, MUTTON SUET, FULTON'S LEADER

P.P.	Name	Owner	Wt.	Odds
5	Jack's Rejected	P. Conway	67½	7-2
4	Mutton Suet	M. Dubiel	58	9-2
7	Fulton's Leader	O. Beckner	61½	9-2
1	Night Call	W. Bryant	62	9-2
6	Joe D. Rock	H. Spencer	58	8-1
8	Blue Cyclone	W. Prevatt	56	8-1
2	Lee Rock	C. Burnett	64½	10-1
3	Jerry Actor	P. Spencer	55	10-1

FIFTH RACE—5-16 MILE
BRIGHT BLACK, BABY HARE, BRANDY JOE

P.P.	Name	Owner	Wt.	Odds
4	Bright Black	P. Moona	66	3-1
7	Baby Hare	H. Spencer	48	3-1
2	Brandy Joe	F. Palermo	65	4-1
6	Rogue River	Premier Ken	50	7-1
3	Sandy Hare	F. Spencer	60	8-1
1	Demonstrator	C. Looney	59	8-1
8	Playhouse	F. Stutz	63	10-1
5	Touring Days	C. Burnett	56	12-1

The extra distance favors BRIGHT BLACK in this number but he'll have to move some to stave off that smart ground saver BABY HARE. BRANDY JOE should better his last. ROGUE RIVER likes it [illegible] the stretch and might upset.

SIXTH RACE—FUTURITY
MR. TICKLER, CHUBGOER, LOW DOWN BREEZE

P.P.	Name	Owner	Wt.	Odds

NEWSOM Colorful PLAYER

HAD BATTLE WITH HOGAN

By KIRK MILLER
(Sports Editor for Washington Times)

Washington, June 11—This boisterous Buck Newsom, who comes to the Red Sox from Washington with Outfielder Ben Chapman for the Ferrell brothers and Mel Almada, is as nearly the counterpart of the National League's Dizzy Dean as can be found in the entire ranks of the American League.

The chief difference is that the garrulous Newsom can't pitch up to his conversation, whereas Dizzy Dean can just about back up all of his boasts and half of his wise cracks.

Fenway Park addicts will find in Newsom a colorful and care-free guy, ready at all times to engage in light and flippant conversation on and off the field. Good-natured to a degree, the fellow has unlimited confidence in himself and really thinks he's the last word in pitching.

HAS FINE COURAGE

But he says all of these things of himself with a pardonable chuckle which leaves you, not despising him for his cock-sure self-appraisal, but rather glorifying in his spirit. With Buck Newsom, every time he enters the box he is about to pitch his greatest game.

He has insurmountable spirit and courage. He's the type who would drop dead in the box if his manager left him in there pitching long enough.

His intestinal fortitude probably has no equal in the league. During the opening game of the season of 1936, with President Franklin Delano Roosevelt sitting in a first base box, Newsom was hit squarely in the cheek by Ossie Bluege, relaying a ball to first base.

Fans familiar with Bluege's rifle-like thrusts down to first base may well realize Ossie had something on the throw. The force of the impact made such a sharp sound that it could be heard all over the park.

Newsom was stunned, but he kept his feet, swirling around in circles like an enraged animal, holding his gloved hand to his face.

Did he quit?

He did not!

Despite the insistence of Trainer Mike Martin and Manager Bucky Harris that he retire from the game he stuck in there for five more innings and won his ball game, 1 to 0, with Lefty Gomez opposing him.

Newsom's Washington uniform had hardly shaped itself to his broad shoulders when he first arrived from St. Louis when he was hit on the shin with a batted ball propelled by Earl Averill. Little was made of the incident at the moment and he continued in the box.

After the game he complained of increasing pain and submitted to an X-ray, which developed a fractured lower leg.

JAMMED WITH HOGAN

Within the last month, Newsom, driven from the box while the team was on a Western swing, tangled physically with the 250-pound "Shanty" Hogan, the pair being seperated by cooler-headed teammats. The affaire de honeur was over a trifling crack Hogan made as Newsom was taking the long walk from the box to the bench, but Buck didn't relish it and one word led to another.

Newsom is married and has two children. He makes his winter home in Hartsville, S. C. His chief winter pastime is quail hunting, and before the season half the citizenry of Boston may expect a pressing invitation to accept of the pleasant Newsom hospitality next winter and perchance go out and kill their own quail for breakfast. He boasts his kennel of dogs as the best in either Carolina.

Newsom is a chronic spring hold-out and does considerable winter-time broadcasting from a Charlotte radio station—in contrast to his summer-time sounding-off around the American League circuit. A nice, clean overgrown country boy with a chip on his shoulder—that's Buck Newsom.

B. C. Boys Leave

'EASY MONEY' HURT BRADDOCK

Career Arrested Through 'Good-Time Charlie' Tendencies

This is the sixth of twelve special articles in which one of the most distinguished of sports writers makes public his long personal study of the most miraculous of "come-back" champions. Hugh Fullerton is now considering Braddock's early ring career.

By HUGH FULLERTON

Braddock's mother and aunt wanted him to be a priest, but gave that idea up early in his life.

His father wanted him to be a dock worker, and his uncle wanted him to be a boxer like Yank Kenney who was his uncle's ideal of a great fighter, which may or may not qualify uncle as a boxing expert.

But, up to the time he was nineteen, Jim had no fixed ambition for anything save a good time and a good fight for the fun of fighting.

Huber wanted a sparring mate, so he took on Braddock on the theory of teaching him while practicing hooks and jabs on Jim.

Doyle was managing Joe Braddock, Jim's older brother, and one night Joe was matched to box in a show at Moose Hall in Grantwood, N. J., so Jim went along to see the fun.

Joe was in the dressing room getting ready when the promoter announced that someone had failed to appear to box Tom Hummell, and called for volunteers.

$3 FOR FIRST FIGHT

Jim lifted his hand, was invited to put on the gloves . . . the first time he ever had been in a regular ring. He was introduced as Jimmy Ryan.

They were knocking each other down as rapidly as possible and one or the other was bouncing off the canvas about every minute.

"What'll Mom say?" he yelled. "What'll Pop do?"

Jim was too busy with Hummell to reply. He wanted to get that fight over and battled harder, so that he won and was given $3, which comforted him greatly when they agreed to keep the bout a secret from the other members of the Braddock tribe, even though a black eye and a swollen nose are hard to conceal.

KAYOS HEAVYWEIGHT

Spurred by his success against Hummell, Braddock began representing the Irish-American Club, and he won 45 fights in tournaments as an alleged amateur.

The fight that proved him to be promising material was the one against Frank Zavita in Newark, in which he learned the meaning of "taking and giving." Zavita outweighed him 75 pounds.

The big fellow kept taunting the youngster until Braddock was mad as well as hurt and, throwing caution to the winds, waded in and swinging a wild right, dropped Zavita dead in his tracks with a blow to the jaw.

Although he was three weeks recuperating from the damage Zavita had done to his digestive apparatus, Jim engaged in battle in Astoria, knocked out one of the best boys in that section and became a big drawing card in and about Long Island City.

However, one discovers that this period of Braddock's career was largely wasted. He was progressing too rapidly and too easily.

That was in the winter of 1924. Dempsey was still his hero and still champion, and the idea that he might ever hold that title did not enter his head. His ambitions seem to have been centered upon a good time, and the next fight.

Confidence in himself was in danger of becoming over-confidence. There was every reason for this condition of mind because he was knocking over every opponent; men and boys were telling him how great he was, and it is easy to believe that line when young.

"GOOD FELLOW"

Several persons with more experience were commencing to fear that a promising boy was on the way to fistic and probably physical ruin, knowing that drinking beer, dancing, running around at night and keeping in condition to box making an impossible combination.

The latter was a business man who preferred cash to trophies. Also Doyle insisted on some sort of training but Jim, with the cockiness and conceit of the post-adolescent, felt that a shave, a shine and a brush of the hair after a shower were sufficient to put him in prime condition.

CHANGES STYLE

Under Doyle's management, he fought three bouts, none of which meant anything beyond a $35 purse.

Braddock seemed to have become a case of arrested development. He had grown into the legitimate light heavyweight class, yet his magnificent body was not filling out.

There had been a change in his style of fighting. Even now some of the fellows, who worked with him and boxed with him when he was twenty years of age, say he could hit harder and faster, especially with his right hand as a light heavyweight than he does as a heavyweight.

Certainly he has changed his right hand [illegible] from a [illegible] power to a much shorter and less open [illegible] which he delivers with a few [illegible] tion as the [illegible]

I suspect that this change in the right hand was due to its oft broken bones. Yet Braddock strikes without sign of timidity or fear of injuring it even while sparring and declares the lethal ring weapon is as strong as it ever was, and much stronger than during three years of his earlier fighting career.

From the time he was nineteen in 1924 up to 1926, while winning steadily, he advanced very little in his profession. Then he reached another turning point of his strange fistic career.

Chapman, Grove In Sox Lineup At Detroit

Detroit, Mich., June 11—With Ben Chapman in center field, and Lefty Grove in the box, the Boston Red Sox take the field this afternoon against the Tigers in the first game of a series of four.

The Sox are elated over the trade which brought Chapman and Buck Newsom here for the Ferrell brothers and Mel Almada.

Rick Ferrell is a fine catcher but the Sox have been delighted with the work of Gene Desautels, former Holy Cross boy, who has been receiving regularly since Rick injured his hand.

WARNING TO FRICK

The Great 'I' Man From St. Louis

'Better Lay Off,' Diz Says

By AUSTEN LAKE

[illegible] and still gloating about his [illegible] victory over the President of the National League, Dizzy Dean re-enacted the [illegible] drama [illegible] head news last week and which [illegible] Prexy [illegible] Frick to [illegible].

MIND LEAP FROGS

"Do you know what he said?" . . . he would relate, interrupting his own narrative.

He is nursing a mad at Prexy Frick like a school boy pouting at the teacher and has begun to believe what started as a pretense.

"He's gotta lay offa me," he warned, the overhead hotel bulb forming a halo in the tobacco haze about his head—symbolic circle of cerebral impotence.

INDEPENDENTLY WEALTHY

He called no new names and repeated no old ones, explaining, "I'm ducking agruments till I get my breath."

There was an ominous promise [illegible] that. Because it is too much to expect from this human museum [illegible] that he will practice the [illegible] art of delicacy and tact beyond his point of boredom.

"Still," he added, lest manhood be impugned, "I'm taking no abuse neither. I don't need to."

He meant, of course, that he has an independent bankroll and would fulfil his eternal threat to "go home" if irked by too much authority.

There is a curious half way attitude on the part of the Cardinal players toward Dizzy. [illegible] speaks [illegible]

[illegible]

SUCKER AT POKER

His teammates feel no affection for Dean and, if he were less of a pitcher, they would give him the [illegible] in the hundred ways that [illegible] ball players [illegible]

[illegible] that he is [illegible] privileged person, and the [illegible] is excusable [illegible] the wisdom in his elbow. Besides, Diz is such a sucker at draw poker that the lads win most of his pocket money.

He said, with a smirk on his broad lips, that "another year or two in baseball would be enough."

He craves the happy home life of the Oklahoma cotton country, the companionship of cattle, the musical whinny of mules and the long, sun-drenched afternoons of doing nothing.

He was spared the curled up corners of Cardinal mouths as he said this. There were no Cardinals within earshot. But they are used to hearing Dizzy search his mind for the nearest [illegible]

"Baseball is just a side line anyhow," he said, telling on his fingers the various money-mediums toward riches he possessed—a cereal company's contract for $30,000, a gasoline hookup for $16,000 and objects of advertising endorsement for $20,000 more.

THE GREAT PREVARICATOR

These, while not exactly [illegible] of his imagination, are [illegible] beyond the truth. [illegible] Diz is a pathological prevaricator [illegible] to turn the truth into paper [illegible] shapes.

[illegible]

Somehow the virtue of veracity has never quite jelled in his system, though his fibs are never malicious, merely tracing to a desire to make his legend loom a little larger, as one who prefers fiction to autobiography.

After the postponement of the game at the Polo Grounds he [illegible] through the lobby to take a taxi from Mrs. Patricia Dean at Bradenton, Fla., speaking over the open [illegible] great [illegible] connubial intimacies.

I asked Diz how he accounted for his pitching greatness, and he replied, "God just hung that kind of an arm on my shoulder," which is nearer to the truth than he suspects.

He has the same open-eyed, candid juvenile unblinking stare and the same velvet resonances of voice as Max Baer, the hallucinated fist fighter had when he was giving out to the press his naivetes just before the Louis fight—happy little boys inside whiskery, adult bodies.

EATS IN PRIVATE

I mentioned spot pitching, the little knack of tossing the ball at "holes" in a batter's stance at the plate, and Diz said, contemptuously, "Guys without stuff are spot pitchers. I just turn on the power."

He has it in gobs.

Furthermore, whatever his lack of social intellect, he has a fund of baseball brains—mental processes that are totally different.

Dizzy has borrowed one of Babe [illegible] hotel habits. He eats his [illegible] in upstairs privacy instead of in the public eating rooms where hordes of boys and grownups [illegible] for his autographs.

But when trapped he performs these petty favors with Ruth's old patient majesty—copying that tired look as he hands back book and pen which one used to see in movies of King Edward VIII before he abdicated.

"Victory for me" chirps Dizzy Dean as he raises his right hand. The greatest of baseball greats is in town today with the Cardinals and is still gloating over his victory in his battle with Ford Frick. For Dean's exalted opinion of himself, read Austen Lake's story in today's Boston Evening American.

Without doubt he is baseball's good and gracious monarch and a worthy successor to Ruth, who like him, was a nobody from nowhere who became rich, beloved and renowned.

The Cardinals and Bees were forced to be idle today when cold and threatening weather necessitated the postponement of a four-game series. Something that's never happened to Medford high, or in fact to any school in Greater Boston, occurred yesterday. All the letter men of the baseball got together and elected co-captains for next year's team. And what makes [illegible] the more interesting [illegible] twins.

Robert and Francis Glynn, who can hardly be told apart, have the honor of being the first twin co-captains of Medford. And the Glynns formed the only twin battery in high school teams. That is, when Bob, who is not in his post in centerfield, is tossing them up to brother Fran.

BROWN Sure He'll Kayo AL McCOY

Natie Brown, New [illegible] heavyweight from Washington, D. C. will climb into the ring at Fenway Park [illegible] of whipping Al McCoy [illegible] the featured 10-round bout of the Good [illegible] A. C. boxing show.

"I stayed 10 rounds with Joe Louis and have met the best of them without ever looking too bad or being too far behind at the finish.

"I know how to fight McCoy and will probably knock him out. I'm certain if it goes 10 rounds I'll get the verdict."

His pilot, Billy McCarney, has seen McCoy in several bouts and has been coaching Brown for two weeks since the match was first suggested on the way to whip the N. E. heavyweight king.

McCarney is regarded as the smartest fight pilot along Broadway, even smarter than Joe "We Wuz Robbed" Jacobs, whose managerial ability has stood out boldly, chiefly in the career of Max Schmeling.

McCoy will be boxing a good heavyweight next Monday night at Tom Yawkey's spacious ball park and will likewise be sparring with the smartness of McCarney who'll be in Brown's corner pulling the strings and calling Natie's shots.

Both men promptly fall in love with the provocative Claudette although Douglas kids himself that his interest is entirely big-brotherly [illegible] Montgomery knows it's love in bloom, and no fooling.

Robert Kent and Rochelle Hudson are co-starred in "That I May Live," story of an ex-jailbird who finds it practically impossible to live honestly until he meets the one girl, and things begin to break right for them.

22 'Million Dollar' Films Paramount's Goal for 1937-38

Twenty-two "million dollar" pictures will head Paramount's list of between 50 and 60 feature productions to be released during the 1937-38 season, Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution, announced yesterday at the company's annual meeting of sales and production executives now in session in Los Angeles.

To produce this ambitious program Paramount has increased its production budget approximately $10,000,000 over last season's expenditures, Agnew pointed out.

The scheduling of this record-breaking number of high calibre pictures comes in direct response to public demand as demonstrated during the past year for pictures on the scale of "The Plainsman," "The Big Broadcast of 1937," "Waikiki Wedding" and similar big screen successes.

'Candida' Wins at Shubert

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

The audience that saw Katharine Cornell and her company last night at the Shubert Theater enjoyed itself hugely, grew steadily more enthusiastic as the short play progressed.

"Candida" is a beautiful example of the fact that a good play ages well, like fine cheese or rare wine, and this is Bernard Shaw's best. When I first saw it in the spring of 1904 I thought at the time it was the finest piece I had ever seen and promptly bought myself a floppy black beaux-arts tie like Arnold Daly's and wore it all summer being Marchbanks. Last night I still thought it was the finest of Shaw's plays—and that is saying a great deal.

Candida is the first "straight" part I have seen Katharine Cornell in. All the others have been passionate or tragic or historical or exotic. But Candida, of course, is Shaw's conception of the womanly woman, the perfect woman nobly planned to warm, to comfort, to command. At least, that's the way I remember the line. It may be inexact. It is a fairly easy part to play, particularly after the tragic heroics of the Malayan woman in "The Wingless Victory." The actress needs only to be delightful, humorous, womanly for two short acts and then at the end—in the finest last scene since "The Doll's House"—she has one of the finest opportunities on the modern stage.

* * *

The story needs no retelling now forty years after its first production. I suspect Shaw got the idea from Henry Arthur Jones' "The Masqueraders," in which the unhappy wife wrings her hands in the background while her scoundrelly husband and her noble lover cut the cards for her. In this country it was played by Viola Allen and Henry Miller and William Faversham. But the Fabian soap-boxer snorted into his red whiskers and said "Nonsense! No real woman would stand for that. I'll show you the real article." The result was "Candida" with the wife choosing the strong husband because he was the weaker of the two and sending the Shelley-like poet out into the night because he could stand alone without happiness. But they never knew the secret in the poet's heart.

As usual in a Cornell-McClintock production acting and setting were more than competent. How competent it was may be guessed that out of the long cast of "The Wingless Victory" Miss Cornell used only one player for this piece, Kent Smith, the dour Phineas Mcqueston, who played Rev. James Mavor Morrell. The rest of the cast for Candida was new, a wise decision, because Maxwell Anderson's poetry demands a different type of acting from Shaw's prose.

It is interesting to compare them with the original company of 1903 in which Dorothy Donnelly, later famous as Madame X played Miss Cornell's part, Arnold Daly in his first managerial venture of course did Eugene Marchbanks. The Lexy Mill was the inimitable Ernest Lawford, old man Burgess was acted by Herbert Standing, father of the late Sir Guy Standing, and Prossy by the sardonic comedienne who later became an idol of the movies, the late Louise Closser Hale.

That was a great cast—or maybe I was very young. The present is a very good cast. Morgan Farley was the Lexy Mill who, I suspect, did not get quite all of the comedy Shaw meant in the part.

* * *

A. P. Kaye struck me as an admirable Burgess, the old economic royalist with a cockney accent, quite overcome by the instability of intellect in a clergyman's household. And Mildred Natwick's Prossy was a triumph of the comic as the cockney typist suffering from love repressions and inhibitions, who broke the pledge because she was a beer teetotaler, not a champagne teetotaller, because she didn't like beer. The easy happiness of the audience's laughter at them all was refreshing after the audience's rather strained silence in "The Wingless Victory."

The burden of the piece was, of course, sustained by Mr. Kent as Morell, Robert Harris as Marchbanks, and Miss Cornell. Morell, a far more human part than Anderson's Rev. Phineas was convincing, natural dignified and appealing, speaking with the "clean athletic articulation of a practiced orator" to which Shaw alludes.

Mr. Harris' Marchbanks, a little less elvish and other worldly than one might prefer, played with his feet on the ground and made the part strongly credible and masterful, particularly in the last act, the great act.

I prefer Miss Cornell white and English to coffee-colored and Malayan. Candida is one of the classic parts of modern English drama. The star played it with beauty and charm, of course, an abundant naturalness, and in the great last scene with skilled authority and control over an undercurrent of genuine feeling. One agrees with Mr. Shaw that she IS Candida. A large audience apparently enjoyed every minute of the play

Thrills Pack Met Film; Gay Major Bowes' Stage Show

By PEGGY DOYLE

Life atop the high-tension towers and love of a girl who insisted her sweetheart keep his feet on the ground constitute the theme of "Slim," the film adaptation of the best-seller of some months ago which is the current attraction at the Met this week.

Henry Fonda, who is due in the East to begin rehearsal August 15 for Producer Arthur Hopkins' "Blow Ye Winds," plays the title role. He and Pat O'Brien are a pair of intrepid linesmen who spend all the working hours up among the clouds adjusting high tension wires. For the risks the Warner Brothers production has them take, intrepid is a mild word for them. According to this movie, the life of a linesman is even less brief than that of a bigtime Chicago gangster and infinitely more risky. As a career it's a certain suicide compact. And now are you sufficiently discouraged, boys, or do you still crave to be a linesman?

The lady in question is Margaret Lindsay. She nurses Pat back to health when he is brought into a Chicago hospital on a stretcher, cracked up all but fatally as a result of an occupational accident.

Nurse Lindsay learns to care for him but the O'Brien wants no responsibility. All he asks is her gay companionship when he blows into town, with a fat purse and a determination to paint the town until his finances give out.

Naturally, when he brings the personable "Slim" to Chicago with him the next time, Miss Lindsay gives them both a warm welcome. She finds "Slim" definitely charming and he discovers that he's fonder of her than he ever meant to be, considering that she is his pal, Pat's girl-friend.

'PARNELL' CONTINUES AT LOEW'S

"Parnell," M-G-M's film adaptation of the play done on the New York and Boston stages a year ago, is continuing on Loew's State and Orpheum screens by popular demand.

Clark Gable and Myrna Loy play the title roles in this exciting drama of the great Irish leader who sacrificed power and glory for the love of a beautiful, warm-hearted woman.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

More than 120 ambitious Junior Birdmen model builders have formally registered for New England's greatest model plane flying competition, the annual outdoor championship match to decide the winner of the free trip to Atlanta, Ga., and holders of gold, silver and bronze medals, which will be held at Franklin Field, Blue Hill and Talbot avenues, Dorchester, all day Monday, June 28.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA
Membership open to all boys and girls 10 to 21)

I wish to join the Junior Birdmen of America. I enclose a dime (well wrapped) for my gold wings and other membership materials.

Street address ....
City .... State ....
My Age Is Now .... (Give Your CORRECT Age)

Mail to Junior Birdmen, Boston American Wing, 100 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

These include 21 members of the Flying Hawks squadron of John Winthrop school, commanded by Roy Oro and sponsored by Miss Esther F. Larson, eighth grade geography teacher. Three of the 21 are girls.

Most of the Flying Hawks are concentrating on gliders and are patterning their models after the Hervat 39-minute flying glider plans for which are available upon request at wing headquarters.

Commander Oro and several other members, however, are expected to also enter the stick and cabin model events.

The registered contestants also include 11 Waltham model builders who are members of squadrons organized in the public schools there by Howard Cheney, director of junior aeronautics and WPA instructors of model building classes. Most of the 11 are boys who have had some experience in competitive model flying.

While many of the contestants have engaged in previous Junior Birdmen competitions, none have participated in a contest so spectacular or thrilling as that being arranged as the 1937 Outdoor Championship tournament on Monday, June 28.

A feature of this year's meet will be aerial activity by naval, military, commercial and privately owned aircraft with pilots and airport managers co-operating in a most unusual tribute to Junior Birdmen and dipping their wings above the field.

Flights of all Boston-bound and New York-bound passenger planes of the American Air Lines will be routed over the field, according to W. Nelson Bump, district sales manager. These will consist of eight flights by the 12-ton Douglas Flagships and four flights by Stinson A's.

Hal Martin, owner-manager of Dennison Airport, has a new Taylorcraft, a Taylor Cub, a Waco and a Fairchild photographic plane which he expects to send over the field. Emerson Carpenter, Cal. Hjerth and J. Smith Dodge will be the pilots. He will also seek to have as many privately owned planes as possible take off from his field for the site of the contest.

Martin got 16 airplanes into the air at one time last year when the call went out for all aircraft to take the air in the observance of the air mail's anniversary.

Representatives of air bases will be among those who talk over the public address system which will be provided at the field to keep spectators and contestants informed of the progress of the competition.

All model builders are reminded that they have slightly more than two weeks in which to construct their craft.

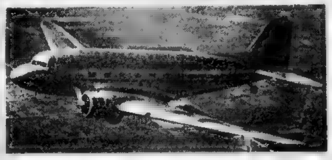
Those who have not begun should send now for their free contest manuals. This can be obtained by writing to Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, Boston. The manual contains the specifications to which the models must be built, the list of prizes, the rules which will govern the meet and other information.

It also contains an entry blank which should be filled in and returned to the wing office immediately. This is necessary because bulletins, giving "tips" on construction and details of the contest, [illegible] to registered [illegible].

It is also necessary in order that [illegible] contestants' names may be printed in the program which will be distributed to spectators. All entries MUST be filed not later than midnight, June 21, a week in advance of the competition.

* * *

Contestants who are planning to build or are now building the R. O. G. cabin model will get considerable help on Rule "F" by reading the Junior Birdmen page of this coming Sunday's Boston Advertiser. On the page is a two-column diagram showing what is and what is not permitted under this rule. It shows how the rear may be made detachable for the motor hook and where the perimeter measurement is made.



This Douglas flagship of the American Air Lines Boston-New York run will be one of the score of planes that dip their wings in salute to Junior Birdmen over Franklin Field on Monday, June 28, during the annual outdoor model plane flying championships to determine the New England titleholder for 1937.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

AND so down to the business of making known that some men named Marx, now three in number as against four of yore, will star in the "Hollywood Hotel" program this evening (WEEI) at 9 o'clock.

Be it known also there is no intention of detouring the business of devious Joseph Anthony Di Pesa. He greatly desires to have mention columnistically clarioned about said screening to be shown next week at the Hub theaters where he has long promoted press relations. Joe labors arduously for Loew's State and Orpheum edifices of entertainment.

"N F T"

So much for a kickoff and perhaps the kindling of a spark in the big brown Cantor-like eyes [illegible].

PROMISING PROGRAM

As for the airing of "A Day at the Races" tonight, it marks the first Marx bit of broadcasting heard for many a month. Word is in hand from those who have seen the radio rehearsals in Hollywood that there is much corking comedy packed into the program from start to finish.

Louella Parsons, [illegible] writer for the [illegible] American, will [illegible] make preview [illegible] introduce [illegible] Al Jolson, George Jessel and [illegible] team of Weber and Fields [illegible]. Jessel [illegible] tribute to Weber and Fields [illegible] a professional [illegible].

Likewise vacation-bound and taking leave of loudspeakers is the popular "Cheerio" period following the 8.30 to 9 o'clock visit tomorrow morning. Return of the Cheerio feature is scheduled for Monday, September 27, as usual [illegible] 8.30 a. m.

Bob (Bazooka) Burns and his bride have returned to Hollywood to start housekeeping. Next week they will move into an $85,000 mansion which Burns has purchased in Bel Air, suburb of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Burns for many years was [illegible] of the radio comic's first wife, who died last year, and has been [illegible] of Bob [illegible].

15 Kane Stores Start Carnival Days Sales

In 15 Kane stores in New England the annual Carnival Day Sales opened today and will continue through tomorrow, with trainloads of new furniture ready to go to customers at bargain prices.

Harry Kane, president of one of America's largest institutions, has planned for the two-day sales for months, using the power of mass purchasing to make it possible to offer his clients the savings announced in today's advertising columns of the Boston Evening American.

Simmons, Alexander Smith, Norge, Frigidaire and other makers of nation-wide repute are co-operating to make Kane's Carnival Days a success, offering their products at special prices.

President Kane, commenting on the sale, says:

"We have done everything in our power to make Carnival Days greater than ever before and to provide savings which cannot fail to show our appreciation to New Englanders for the tremendous increase in our business which they have made possible in recent months.

"I feel that there is no finer thing that a store can do, in appreciation for the support which has made its rapid growth possible, than to express its gratitude to its customers in dollars and cents savings.

"After reviewing the final plans for Carnival Days, I am proud to be able to present this sale; to feel that I can repay my debt to New England, and do my part in enabling thousands to have finer, more comfortable homes at lower cost."

POLLOCK QUIT CAPE FOR IPSWICH

GULLS GUIDE TO SCHOOLS

Pollock in Ipswich Bay!

So that's where the big sea-fighters went when they left Buzzard's Bay and the Cape this last week.

While many fishermen on the Cape were being disappointed over not striking any pollock or tautog, four Boston anglers went to Ipswich Tuesday in a power launch, just on a hunch.

They found several schools of large pollock, took an even dozen and could have taken more.

GULLS ARE GUIDES

Asa Osborne, Warren Raymond, George Brett and W. B. Rice took Rice's 40-foot power cruiser, circled slowly around the school of pollock as it moved through the bay.

Gulls circling over the fish led the fishermen to their quarry; sand eels and spirling attracted the pollock to the surface.

All were caught on light tackle, rods with six-ounce tips, and reels carrying 18-pound test thread.

Raymond said the 20-pounders would run as much as 25 and 30 yards off the spool, on the first dash after taking the hook.

Luck is playing the North Shore. An extraordinary specimen of a striped bass, weighing 28 pounds, was caught in Mayo's trap off Gloucester Bay—and no anglers fishing there yet.

* * *

The fish plane to Rangeley Lakes, Me., originally scheduled to leave today, has been postponed for two weeks.

A combination of conditions is responsible; high water, making fishing poor; a sudden plague of flies and gnats in Maine and Canada, and a general let-down in the way the salmon are striking.

The plane will leave East Boston airport, however, on June 25.

* * *

A few stripers have been running up the North River, between Scituate and Greenbush on the South Shore.

One Hingham resident took five Wednesday night, another three. An exceptionally high tide hampered fishing.

* * *

Two Manomet residents, Bruce Adams, a Boston artist, and Wilfred Weeks, fished this week from the bank of Eel river, taking several stripers.

* * *

* * *

Fishermen projecting trips into Canada or Maine are warned to provide themselves with fly ointment or lotions to keep the insects away. Warm weather and heavy rains have brought out the summer pests.

Boat Disappears; Police in Hunt

Metropolitan police were today searching the shores of the Charles River for a 16-foot motor launch which was either stolen or had broken away from its Watertown moorings yesterday. The owner, Clarence Stone, of Albert avenue, Belmont, reported it missing when he went to the mooring to make repairs.

Job Tips Before applying for a job, analyze your own personality. If you are a good mixer and can recognize the merits of others, and above all, ever willing to co-operate: seek a position with a large corporation where these qualities will stand you in good stead. If on the other hand you are nervous, temperamental, and not a good mixer; seek a position where few are employed, where your personality will have as free reign as possible in this many-people world. You are the best judge as to which type of firm you should apply in seeking employment.

Have a Heart, Boys!

SECRETARY of the Treasury Morgenthau, pressed by reporters for details of current government borrowing, cried:

"Have a heart, boys, have a heart!"

Taxpayers, compelled to support all government borrowing and SPENDING, may well echo his appeal.

Children, now playing in the streets, will be paying back this borrowed money when they are grandparents.

They, too, should be saying:

"Have a heart, boys, have a heart!"

Their appeal is not to newsmen, who merely report the day's facts, but to the agencies of government RESPONSIBLE FOR THE SPENDING.

Mr. Morgenthau said to the newsmen:

"You know as well as I DO what has happened in the last few months."

Every taxpaying citizen, which means every citizen with the price of a loaf of bread, ALSO knows what has happened.

Their government has gone 35 billion dollars IN DEBT.

Its spending and borrowing and WASTE are PREVENTING RECOVERY.

All of these facts give the American people cause to implore their government, the Congress—EVEN Mr. Morgenthau—to:

"Have a heart, boys, have a heart!"

Hats Off to Murphys!

SUNDAY is Murphy Day in Massachusetts, and more than a thousand of that great and honorable family will be Judge Charles S. Murphy's guests at his Paxton estate.

"Anyone who is a Murphy or has been a Murphy is welcome." So reads the invitation.

Well might America declare a holiday and pay due respect to the Murphys. Never was there a more glorious clan.

It may surprise some to know it, but it's true. Many a Murphy is actually more noble than King George of England. The Murphy ancestry goes way back to the year 114 A. D. Fiacha Baiceada, son of Cathire More, early king of Ireland, founded the name.

A newspaper of 100 pages would be required to record even the names of famous Murphys, present and past. You find them wherever you look—knights and barons in Britain's Burke's Peerage and outstanding men in America's Who's Who.

You will find them high in the councils of every English-speaking country. Frank Murphy, former high commissioner to the Philippines, is Governor of Michigan. Francis P. Murphy is Governor of New Hampshire. Too, there's our own John J. Murphy, United States Marshal in Boston.

Proud are the Murphys. And proud indeed are we. It is a pleasure and a privilege to salute that distinguished family.

Prevent Another Tragedy

TO maintain a public bathing beach and to leave it unguarded is to invite drownings.

The deaths, Wednesday, of the little O'Rourke twin sisters in the Charles River were a tragic example.

Youthful bathers must be warned away from dangerous spots. When they enter the so-called safe places they must be watched.

The minutes between life and death are exceedingly few when the non-swimmer goes beyond his depth.

We cannot take chances with the lives of the thousands that use our municipal beaches, least of all the lives of children.

The City Councillors promise life-guard protection for all these beaches. They should carry out that promise NOW. It is their duty.

We cannot bring back the little O'Rourke twins. BUT WE CAN AND SHOULD PROTECT OTHER GIRLS AND BOYS.

We Welcome Them Home

IF Major Hodge and Lieutenant McNeil, Massachusetts National Guard fliers, ever write an adventure novel, they'll not have to use imagination.

We are mighty glad to welcome this brave pair home, and you are, too. Men of their courage don't have to write novels. They live them.

Good Luck, Red Hose!

THERE is hope for the Red Sox. The trading of the two Ferrells and Almada to Washington for Ben Chapman and "Buck" Newsom provides it. And Boston sincerely expects it.

A Shocking Spectacle

AN Associated Press dispatch from Glendale, Cal., tells us:

"The body of Jean Harlow rested in a cemetery crypt, snatched bare of flowers by souvenir hunters."

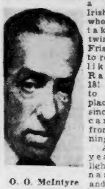
Nothing is sacred to some people, not even Death. As a great poet so aptly observed: "Where angels fear to tread, fools rush in."

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, June 11—Thoughts while strolling: Sheila Barrett and Adela Rogers St. Johns are a couple of Irish lasses who could be taken for twins in a light Frisco fog. O, to recite poetry like Basil Rathbone at 18! No one to snipe misplaced whoms since F. P. A. came down from his conning tower.



O. O. McIntyre

Among those years touch lightly: Bernard Baruch and Whitney Warren. Ernest Boyd's jet of red whiskers—like fire in a thorn bush. You couldn't tell Cole Porter from Jimmy Savo in the latter's makeup. Countess de Barbac, the titled housekeeper of the Ritz Carlton.

Rhyme: I never grow bored reading Corey Ford. Last of the strolling Shakespearian players of yesteryear: James Young. No. 1 Tight Collarist: Sid Solomon. Handsome gents with broken noses: Heywood Broun and Rex Beach. Charles G. Norris in a kimono could pass for a Japanese potentate.

Learn one new thing every day: The coach dog is the only one of the canine species to have diabetes. How Ziegfeld could have spotted Gracie Allen in a Follies! Crack job of reporting: The goings-on at The Colony restaurant by La Roche in the May "Town and Country."

Oh, yes, at The Colony, so I read in "Town and Country," the society gad about Beth Leary, who knows everybody, has a choice table and when not in use, it goes to George Jean Nathan. Now and then Miss Leary has changed her mind and arrived at the restaurant with Nathan under full sail with Lillian Gish or some similar fair charmer.

This has been a disastrous year for theatrical lady producers. Indeed it is a calling that seems to demand the masculine touch—for even then it's an enormous gamble. There are no rich play producers any more, as there were 20 years ago. Among the ladies who have dared and found the Rialto experiment costly the past season are Mrs. Frank Frueauff, Julianna Morgan, Mary Hone and the irrepressible Peggy Fears.

There is, of course, one exception to the feminine flops in the producing end, and that is Anne Nichols who salvaged a fortune out of an offering every critic hooted, "Abie's Irish Rose." She tried to revive it recently, but it met a terrific yawn.

Most inlanders transported to New York are always atingle at the awareness of the sea. For us there is unforgettable aroma about sea weed, tar and that brackish waft that is the effluvia of all pier ends. I have often gone to West street in earlier days to watch the rolling swagger of seamen whose ships had just berthed and who were out to do the town.

And to this day there is no noise so thrilling as the whirr of winches or the resonant clonk of the caulking hammers.

There used to be a place on the Brooklyn waterfront called Spud Hurley's. I was a goggle-eyed stripling, and among the elders in the party was Homer Davenport, the cartoonist. Hurley's was a food and grog shop, the special libation being a steaming rum punch. I was sipping mine and beginning to feel matey when a great hulking fellow with hip-high boots growled: "Drink it down, buddy. What do you think it is—pink tea?" I took the rest in a long swig.

The aftermath was vague, although I remember promising to meet a sailor next day to sign up for a trip around the Horn on a windjammer. But the next day it was only by Herculean effort I could lift my head off the pillow at my uptown boarding house.

No winged creature interests me like the seagull. I have often watched them in storms, wheeling and hurling themselves against the boom. It is not legend they can spot a ship coming in far ahead of the strongest binoculars, and their glad cry of greeting as they race out to meet the ship is a pleasant memory of every voyage.

As a talker-to-myself along the street one of my dodges when caught in the act is to turn it off into a little song. Last evening on the way home with a lady a self-talking gentleman all alone a few paces in front suddenly began to quarrel with some imaginary person and finally began to strike out in sudden fury.

As we got nearer the lady remarked: "He's going to have a swell job humming himself out of that one." But that was what he tried to do when we got abreast of him.

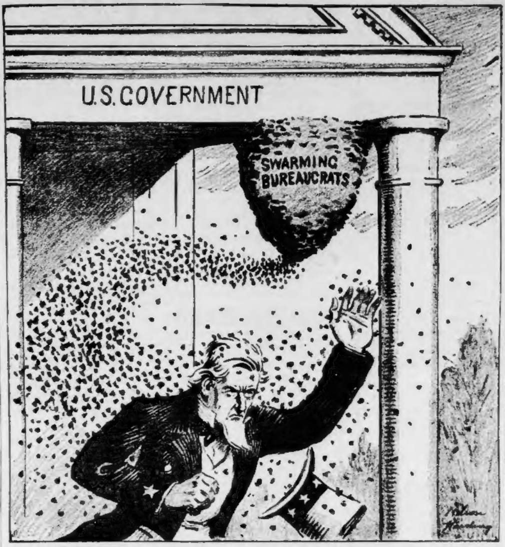
A Hornets' Nest

By Nelson Harding



Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

From where I am writing in the woods I can see a hill.

Free and alone it rises from the valley into the wide, sunny sky. And I have a very friendly interest in that hill. For a whole year now we have faced each other—I from my place under this old oak, it from its place in the sky. So it is, to me, no longer a dumb pile of earth and rock. It is an arrangement of life—abundant and vigorous life.

Elsie Robinson

All sorts of things happen in and on and to that hill. Bears and coyotes, squirrels, foxes, little ground owls and snakes and all manner of bugs live within the hill—sleep and breed there in burrows and dens—have crypt caches of food—and make long, winding runways where they go about their various business.

Deer come stepping softly, lightly through the dim corridors of trees—weave in and out through dappled shadows—bend to drink about some still, brown pool. Bobcats flatten, watching, along gnarled boughs. Birds nest within the leaves—at dawn and dusk the whole forest is webbed with song.

TEEMING WITH LIFE

At noon buzzards hang motionless within the white, hot bowl of sky. At midnight owls go hooting through the chaparral—and bats chase midges with a tiny squeak.

And, of course, the flowers rise and fall constantly in a bright, fragrant tide. Always there are flowers on the hill. Even under a crust of snow I have seen the manzanita's waxy rosy bells.

And never is the hill free from the coming and the going of the wind and the sun and the rain. Constantly its mood changes. There are times when it spreads frail as a bubble against the dreaming sky.

Then it is hard to realize that there are dangerous dens behind that lovely sheen—and foul and poisonous pests within that tenderness.

Never, at any two times, is the hill quite the same. But always, whatever its aspect or mood, it holds my interest. Yes, more than my interest. I feel respect for that hill—respect for the life it gives and the struggle which goes on within it. It is true that it gives life to snakes and bobcats as well as birds and flowers.

BE TOLERANT!

But, from where I sit, all things, regardless of their nature, seem to have their right to life on the hill—and a reason for being. So I do not condemn the hill's products or criticize its moods.

That is the way I always feel about that hill. I wish I could always feel that way about men and women. For human beings are just another sort of arrangement of life—and they have as much right to their peculiar pattern as that hill.

I have no more right to fuss at humans because, out of their abundance, they produce faults and follies, than I have to fuss at that hill because it produces weeds as well as barley and bobcats as well as birds.

I have no more right to get mad at them or sit in judgment on them than I have to get mad at that hill. But I do get mad at them and try to interfere with them.

Life, for me, would be a much finer affair if I could be as tolerant toward living humans as I am toward a living hill.

Isn't It So?

A beauty treatment and a fresh wave are always a sort of spiritual uplift to a woman; but a clean shave, a haircut and a massage merely give a man an upsurging of the vanity which sometimes ends in a little sentimental side-stepping.

Marry —Go— Round

By Helen Rowland

As a baby, a man takes his kisses for granted; as a boy, he takes them as a punishment; as a youth, he takes them as an adventure; and as a husband, he takes them automatically.

Many a man is able to consider himself a prize diplomat because his wife is too diplomatic to let him know that his alibis are so air-tight as a sieve.

Falling in love is like stepping into an uncovered coal-hole or running your car into a telegraph pole—something which always happens to you when you aren't LOOKING for it and least expect it.

When the doctor orders "a change" for a golf-playing husband, it doesn't necessarily mean that he has to pack up and go away; most of them could get a complete change just by staying at home occasionally.

It is no longer considered poor taste for a woman to use rouge, powder and lipstick, in order to be beautiful—unless she fails.

A man's love has to be repeatedly wound up like a clock; but once a woman's heart gets started, it is supposed to keep right on going automatically no matter how long it is neglected.

A woman in love takes on the vanity of the peacock, the subtlety of the fox, the suspicion of the lynx, the tenacity of a bloodhound and the memory of an elephant, says the Cynical Bachelor.

A man falls in love doubtfully and slowly—but he falls OUT of it with a swift and sudden jolt—Like falling out of bed in the midst of a sound sleep.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

That was a foolish statement Homer Martin, international president of the United Automobile Workers of America, made when he said the union would "drive Henry Ford out of business."

Ford could stand that. He has lived most of his life. He can get along if he never makes another car. But what about the thousands and thousands of his employes?

Many of them must wonder what will happen to their jobs if their employer is driven out of business.

Maury Maverick, a Texas congressman, tells members of the U. A. W. A.: "You have better leadership than the industrial leaders of the country." But the bellicose attitude of many of the so-called labor "leaders" does not indicate any great qualifications.

Anybody can stir up trouble and strife but it takes more ability than that to advance the cause of collective bargaining and win and retain the backing of public sentiment for organized labor.

Change is a regular order in this universe. But every eclipse impresses upon us that all laws of nature are not flexible as some of us think all man-made laws should be. Scientists figure out, to the second, the time of eclipses for many years in the future, and how long each eclipse will last.

The June 8 eclipse, lasting seven minutes and four seconds, will be exceeded, they say, by one on June 20, 1955, lasting seven minutes and six seconds, and by one on June 21, 2150, lasting seven minutes and fourteen seconds.

Postmasters, who are said to have been acting under instructions from Washington, D. C., are reported to have refused to accept parcel post packages of food for shipment to workers in strike-bound steel plants.

At one Ohio town, the mailing of a package of medicine was permitted, the package being opened in the presence of two union men to show it contained only medicine.

Apparently C. I. O. organizers are not misrepresenting the situation if they give the impression the administration is backing them.

If sit-down strikers were illegally holding possession of any industrial plant, no one would be denied the right to mail packages of food into them, and the Post Office Department would make delivery, too. No one would attempt to prevent delivery.

That is emphasized by the statement of Chairman Connery of the House Labor Committee that a tax on all machine power will be a necessary sequel to enactment of the administration's wage and hour bill.

He recognizes that establishment of arbitrary maximum working hours and minimum wages will put pressure on industry to seek new labor saving devices.

In an attempt to control this movement, the government would have to slap a tax on machine power.

All the time we are getting farther and farther away from the original idea of taxation solely to finance the necessary cost of government. The new purposes of taxes are a readjustment of wealth and extension of the power of government.

Destructive as they are, floods often are beneficial. For centuries, overflows have fertilized the valley of the Nile. The deposits of silt left by rivers on farm lands increase their productivity. And now we are learning that there is even an element of good in the destructive duststorms which have harassed a large semi-arid section of the United States for several years.

Some wheat growers in western Kansas say the soil in their fields is wonderful. These dry years have given it a rest and as much top soil has been deposited on the land as was blown off.

Thousands of dust bowl acres, when they get sufficient moisture again, may produce bigger crops than ever.

Germany's New Guide

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

It is Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg, and not the impassioned Goering or von Ribbentrop, who takes over the critical negotiations with Mussolini, and who will veer Germany toward war or peace.

Edwin C. Hill

For the last six months, Hitler has been spending more time at Berchtesgaden, in the mountains, with von Blomberg, increasingly active and quietly dominant. Von Blomberg personifies the army, and there reposes the ultimate power, the ultimate decision, once a state cuts loose from democratic moorings.

It is the old, old story of the Praetorian guard—older than the Christian centuries. The Emperor Claudius and a dozen other Romans learned from the Praetors that totalitarian government is an equation of force—always force. If the Praetorian guard is a good one, strong enough to protect the country and the person of the dictator, it takes charge sooner or later.

There is no doubt whatever that the tall, ruddy, astute and able General von Blomberg is moving swiftly to a high ascendancy of power in Germany, and there is every reason to believe that he is less insular, more informed and sensitive to current realities of the civilized world than the Nazi radical messiahs.

LESS WAR DANGER

This writer is no apologist for the Junkers. In the years preceding and during the late holocaust, they were as pig-headed as any of the other main contenders, if not more so. But they are not whirling dervishes; they know something about credit and raw materials, and they understand the necessity of having something with which to redress a trade balance.

I venture a long-range prediction that the continued rise of the army group will lessen the imminent danger of a European war; that it will tone down fanatical chauvinism in Germany out into the trade stream of the world.

The army leaders have a much better idea of just what war is than the Nazi fire-eaters; they know what it is to get a bear by the tail. Many of them have revealed a much better knowledge of Germany's resources in raw materials and techniques than have the political agitators.

General von Blomberg has not been a foe of the Nazis. He moved along with them and let them have their try at reorganizing and revitalizing Germany, but to keep the army aloof. Two years ago, he said significantly:

"We soldiers stand aside from political conflicts; we belong to no party, to no class. We belong to the whole nation and serve the whole community."

When Hitler was in a desperate jangle of nerves, after the purge of three years ago, it was the calm urbane Von Blomberg who straightened him out. He took Der Fuehrer for a sea trip on the Deutschland and helped him get his bearings.

Particularly within the last six months has the shadow of von Blomberg lengthened in Germany. If any man wears the mantle of von Hindenburg, it is he. Before von Hindenburg's death, when casual speech was safer than it is now, it was freely reported in Germany that the old marshal had assigned von Blomberg to keep a watchful eye on Hitler.

GERMANY'S HOPE

The old army caste, of which General von Blomberg is now the leader, never was fluxed in the Nazi totalitarianism. It balked at the oath to the base-born Austrian corporal, and it was the adroit, patient von Blomberg who smoothed things out and prevented a crisis. High-ranking army officers read books whose possession would send a commoner to a concentration camp.

Von Blomberg, a man of high literary and artistic culture, reads anything he pleases. He is a devotee of the arts, a steady attendant at concerts and the opera, musically educated and steeped in Wagner and Beethoven. Blooded saddle horses are his equally enthralling interest.

With Colonel Eric Kuhlenthal, General von Blomberg visited the United States in 1930. American army officers with whom he eagerly exchanged information found him tolerant, informed and engaging. Never overtly opposing the Nazis, keeping the army both strong and aloof, his speech has been strongly at odds with that of the war panjandrums of the Reich.

He denounces the "false romanticism of war," and appeals for international relationships on the basis of "reason, not passion."

He is of ancient aristocratic lineage, in the army since his early youth, on the staff of the high command of the Seventh Army during the World War, now 58 years old, tall, athletic, with no redundance of person—or mind.

He has been a monarchist—never a liberal, in the sense in which we use the word.

But any thoughtful, long-range synthesis of men and events in Germany probably will find new hope for Germany and General von Blomberg in the wheelhouse.

There is definite reason to believe, as Senator Thomas has said, that the Junkers, at any rate, learned a lot during and after the war.

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

J. P. Morgan speaks out courageously on taxes when he says: "CONGRESS SHOULD KNOW HOW TO LEVY TAXES. IF CONGRESS MAKES STUPID MISTAKES, IT IS UP TO CONGRESS TO REMEDY THOSE MISTAKES AND NOT FOR US TAX-PAYERS TO DO SO."

Congress not only "makes mistakes," as Mr. Morgan says, but half the bills it passes are NOT EVEN READ.

"HOW MANY OF YOU CHAIRMEN OF COMMITTEES HERE TODAY KNOW WHO PREPARED THE BILLS YOU HAVE INTRODUCED IN THE LAST TWO YEARS AND HOW MANY OF YOU EVEN READ THEM?"

This was received by the chairmen of the House committees IN SILENCE.

While Congress is investigating the "tax-evaders" it might also investigate a far more serious form of evasion—Congressional DUTY-SHIRKERS.

Cats—They are a mysterious an uncanny lot. An Elmira, N. Y., cat sat for two days in one spot on a roof. Wind and rain had no more effect on its long meditation than a can of cold water on the Sphinx.

Finally, firemen went up after the cat. Just as they were about to grab her she finished her Socratic revery, jumped into a tree and came down to earth and went about her cat business.

What went through the cat's mind is a mystery to us. The only thing we can say of this particular Elmira cat is that while a cat may look at a king it will NOT stand for a fireman.

The English people will not be "permitted" to see newsreels of the wedding of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Warfield. This has the familiar ring of edicts issued in Russia, Germany and Italy. The London Daily Express comments on this as follows:

"You will have to go to France or America—or maybe Russia—to see them, thereby proving that, though a large-sized piece of humbug is talked over here about freedom from censorship and from dictatorship and from whatnot, the imperial British people are still treated as a mentally deficient race."

For three months, by order of a small cabal headed by the Archbishop of Canterbury and Stanley Baldwin, the English people were not "permitted" to know anything of the King Edward the Eighth and Mrs. Simpson affair, which all the rest of the world was talking about and which was rocking the foundations of the British Empire.

England's boasted "free institutions" seem to be passing into the hands of a kind of paternal OGPU, for her press WAS FREER FIFTY YEARS AGO THAN IT IS TODAY.

For a thousand years the St. Bernard dogs of the Mount Saint Bernard Monastery, in the Alps, have been noted for their friendliness and almost human intelligence. They were bred to find men and women lost in the Alps and travelled with a tiny barrel of brandy around their necks. They were the pets of all tourists.

But for some unknown reason, one day, one of these dogs leaped on 10-year-old Marie-Anne Bremond and mauled her to death. The guilty dog could not be found, so the monks killed several of the dogs.

Thus, curiously, in the animal as well as in the human world the innocent must pay for the sins of the guilty.
